CYNTHIA GREY'S CORRESPONDENTS

Tin Shower for Bride-Elect. Will you please give me suggestions as to how a tin shower for a bride should be conducted? What kind of luncheon should be served? I intend giving it in the afternoon. D. L. G. The guests are told to bring something in tin or send the parcel to the hostess. Each article to have a card attached bearing the name of giver and some good wish or sentiment. The usual afternoon refreshments are very simple—tea, or a cold drink, dainty sandwiches, bonbons, small cakes, a salad perhaps, or something frozen. Opening the parcels furnishes the amusement; they may be brought in a clothes basket tied with ribbon.

A Bridegroom's Queries

Please inform the writer what is customary at a wedding where there are ushers, bridesmaids, etc. What part of expense is to be borne by the groom? H. S. A bridegroom pays for carriage for his best man and himself to go to the ceremony and to take himself and bride away; he furnishes the bouquets for bride and her maids; pays the clergyman, buys the wedding ring, and usually sends the ties and gloves to his ushers and best man, besides giving them some little gift like a scarf pin, sleeve links or studs.

Visiting Cards

Kindly tell me if the groom's engraved visiting card should be the same type as the bride's? And if he is a doctor should his card read "Dr." or "Mr."? What is the preferred type for a handsome engraved card? CECIL. If expense does not have to be considered, it is well to have the cards engraved alike. I say this, for often a man has his cards when he marries, and his wife may prefer a different script; it looks better to see them match. The word "Dr." is used, and at present the standard English type is very popular, but script is always in good form.

Thankful's Questions

Is it good form to write anything on a card to go with a wedding gift, and how should a bride be congratulated? You may write "Congratulations and best wishes" upon your card, or it is correct to leave the card without any inscription. You wish the bride happiness and prosperity and congratulate the bridegroom upon his good fortune.

THE MESSAGE BY LOUIS TRACY

Under European legends this mistaken logic would not have caused a reversion to the method of combined attack so dear to the native warrior. Loanda and some of his lieutenants had already displayed their shrewdness by harping constantly on the necessity of depending more on the rifle and less on spear and machet. They would never have permitted an advance in force if they were not certain of their ability to overpower the weak detachment of Hausas at the first rush. In a sense, it was Evelyn's presence which brought about this decision. Their Portuguese ally had made such a point of her capture uninjured that they wished to gratify him, while there were other forcible reasons why they should not waste too many hours on the siege of a paltry place like the mission station. Though the struggle thus far was short and sharp, the unhappy people within the walls were only too conscious of its developments. To their strained senses it seemed that at any moment the door must be burst open and they swept into the clutches of merciless savages. They could not tell who was living or dead. The incessant shooting and the howls and downed all other sounds. Evelyn thought she heard Warden address a word to a lone Hausa, but she could not be sure. Hume, in whom the man was rapidly supplanting the missioner, wished to take a personal share in the defence, but his wife counselled him in an agony of terror, and implored him not to do so. While trying to soothe the distracted woman he reflected that he would probably prove more of a hindrance than otherwise by all it might be as a cudgel, for he did not even understand the mechanism of the breech-block. Bambuk, though a Mohammedan and a Foulah, was no longer a fighting man and he waited now for death with the fatalism he had displayed ever since he had learned that the men of Oku knew were bent on looting Kadana. Evelyn, leaning against the door, with every faculty on alert for the slightest indication of Warden's welfare, nevertheless let her mind stray in the most bewildering manner in a way devoid of fear. If given her choice, she would be out there in the thick of the struggle, using her wits for the safety of the man she loved. Instead, she was condemned to inaction. The intolerable darkness became oppressively oppressive. Memory flew back through time and space to the sunlit day when she sat with Warden and Peter Evans in the most dingy of the Nancy, and saw the grim face of the Oku chief dancing about on the blue walls of the Soler.

What a trivial incident it was in some respects—yet what a mighty upheaval it wrought in the life of the man she loved. Instead, she was condemned to inaction. The intolerable darkness became oppressively oppressive. Memory flew back through time and space to the sunlit day when she sat with Warden and Peter Evans in the most dingy of the Nancy, and saw the grim face of the Oku chief dancing about on the blue walls of the Soler. What a trivial incident it was in some respects—yet what a mighty upheaval it wrought in the life of the man she loved. Instead, she was condemned to inaction. The intolerable darkness became oppressively oppressive. Memory flew back through time and space to the sunlit day when she sat with Warden and Peter Evans in the most dingy of the Nancy, and saw the grim face of the Oku chief dancing about on the blue walls of the Soler.

For an instant the rays of the lamp fell on her face, and she saw the final surge of what must surely be the final and successful assault. A gigantic figure, great with strength and with a swinging adze in fine style by Warden's side, turned and gazed at her. She saw Warden, and she saw the man in the escape from Keitawa, and now his most devoted henchman. He then, and not Warden, was the man who never one in any way resembling Evelyn. To his untutored mind she was a spirit. Her knowledge of the men of Oku induced Figuero and Baumgartner to conspire against her. She had never seen those who loved it, and she knew that she would never have gazed on the Benue River. And how persistently that world creation of Domencio Garcia had clung to either Warden or herself. It was not to be shaken off. Even now, when they were on the verge of death, it was lying there in her room, shrouded in a canvas case. She could almost see it, and she could almost see the scowl everlastingly threatening mankind. Though a fresh outbreak of firing startled her, she was not aware of it. A faint moment of a thrill of supernatural awe at the fancy that the carved image of the by-gone King of Benue had been brought to the actual locality in which its human prototype had ruled millions of those very men who were now her companions.

It was a strange notion, and it dominated her for a moment with a match. Ben Kalil was just in time to parry the blow. Then the adze whirled about, and Warden's broken rifle dived to the ground. Nevertheless, a dozen more negroes were forcing their way up on both sides. A horrible, howling, and fell utterly exhausted at Evelyn's feet. A Hausa was shot through the head and dropped dead. Three men, Warden, Ben Kalil, and a Hausa, now alone, held at bay the human tide which was rushing toward the grasp. Evelyn refused to re-enter the house. She would die where she was. Why did not merciful death come quickly? It would be better if she passed on to the other side. But what would God would vouchsafe this grace, for her woman's heart revolted from the thought of death. In a very chance of hope that her wish might be granted, she looked into the familiar guise of the man who had arms pitifully, for she well knew that while Warden lived no kindly spear or dream would free her soul for that eternal meeting. To Be Continued.

SCOTCH SELECT THEIR OFFICERS

Homegoing Caledonians Make Plans For Next Year's Pilgrimage. Detroit, July 6.—In the course of the meeting of international committee of the Scots of America, at the Cadillac Hotel last night, arrangements were completed for the taking of 2,500 Scotchmen to the land of braes and heather next year. The movement to start a home-going pilgrimage had been on for some time. They were in all thirty-five members of the committee present last night, and the following officers were elected: A. G. Murray, Louisville, chairman; J. A. Anderson, Cincinnati, O., secretary; Donald Guthrie, Beachville, Ont., treasurer; Alexander Fraser, Toronto, Ont., honorary president; Robert Menzies, New York City; honorary vice-president; Rev. David I. Sutherland, Detroit, honorary chaplain; Peter Grant, Detroit, bard; Chief St. Steven, St. Thomas, chairman of the athletic sports committee. In order to accommodate the large body of Scots who are to take the Journey, two boats of the Allen line out of Montreal to Glasgow have been chartered. The St. Lawrence route was decided upon as most convenient, because of the large delegation to go from Canada, which at this date numbers an even 1,000. The western states are to be well represented, as well as the southland. Arriving at Glasgow the party will be met by the Rev. Alexander McCrea, of Creich, Sutherland County, Scotland, who with a body chosen from all the cities of Scotland will welcome the tourists in the name of their people, and present the keys from the Lords Provost of Glasgow and Inverness. At Inverness the travellers will attend the Highland games, and then leave for an extended tour of Scotland. The entire body will remain together

Stomach Ache and Diarrhoea

These common summer ailments are generally caused by the system trying to rid itself of some injurious or indigestible material which has been imprudently taken into the stomach, gulping down iced drinks and sudden changes in the weather. The discomforts and suffering which result are easily prevented and quickly cured by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great family medicine. It is an invaluable tonic for all people who suffer from the heat. It brings restful sleep, cools the blood and tones up and strengthens the whole system. Dr. Lewis J. Davis, of Chicago, Ill., recently wrote: "I was a surgeon in the War of the Rebellion, and have suffered ever since with chronic diarrhoea and disease of the liver. Whiskey heretofore would not agree with me, but I have no trouble in retaining Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It also has strengthened and built me up." Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is endorsed by leading clergymen, doctors, educators, nurses, lawyers, as well as businessmen and women in all walks of life. It is invaluable in the treatment of indigestion, nervousness, malaria, chills, low fevers and all diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes, lungs and stomach. It is a heart tonic, and in old age, when the vital forces are yielding to the weight of years, it will bring strength and vigor to the muscular and nervous system. All druggists, grocers, dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. PUGILIST'S MOTHER BEATEN IN FIGHT

Mrs. Ketchell Suffes From Bruises Received in Scuffle With Tenant. Detroit, July 7.—If Stanley Ketchell, champion middleweight pugilist of the world, could see his mother as she lies suffering from bruises and wounds inflicted on her in a scuffle Tuesday night with one Albert Wagner, a tenant in her home at 252 Seventeenth street, it is likely that "the Michigan demon" would engage in another fight ere long. At the same time, Wagner evidently thinks justice ought to be on his side at the conclusion of his difference with Mrs. Ketchell, for yesterday he swore out a complaint in Justice Jeffrey's court, charging the mother of the prize fighter with assault and battery. Wagner has a smashed nose as part of his case. Whoever was to blame in the affair, Mrs. Ketchell met with pretty serious injury. She is confined to her bed, suffering from bruises to her limbs and side. Her left eye is blackened and swollen; her right arm is puffed up to twice its normal size. "Those shoes where he kicked me," she said, pointing to discolorations on her arm. "I'll tell you how it started. Wagner hit my wife live in the rear room of my home. She and I haven't been getting along well for some time. I told them that they would have to attend to their own business. He called me a scoundrel and hit me with his son Stanley, and want a tenant who will take all the house. Well, that notice angered them. Then there was a dog fight missing, and we had a divorce about that."
