HAY WAS THE FEATURE OF THE LOCAL MARKET

Poultry Prices Remained Unchanged—Country Roads Are Good.

Considering the weather conditions, there was an unusually large supply of hay on the market this morning, and as is usually the case when there is possibility of the hay being wet, the demand was very dull. Up to 10 o'clock about 25 loads had been brought in, and fully 20 of these were still lined up on the market waiting for customers. The prices quoted were $11 to $12.50 per ton, but the small demand will likely bring them lower. The majority of loads will sell at $11 per ton.

There were only two loads of oats in today, one of the loads selling at $1 per cwt., while the other was sold at a lower price. A couple of loads of straw were brought in, but the demand was so dull that low prices were paid for them.

Turkey Prices. There is no change in the price of egg or poultry prices, and it is difficult matter to judge from today's indications whether the price of turkeys will be lower at tomorrow's market.

The farmers in today say that the country roads are excellent for sleighing, and if they continue more so until tomorrow there should be one of the largest Christmas markets of the year.
