

The Advertiser's Pictorial Page

Greek and Armenian peasants are driving their flocks and taking their household goods from Thrace, which is to be occupied by the Turks.

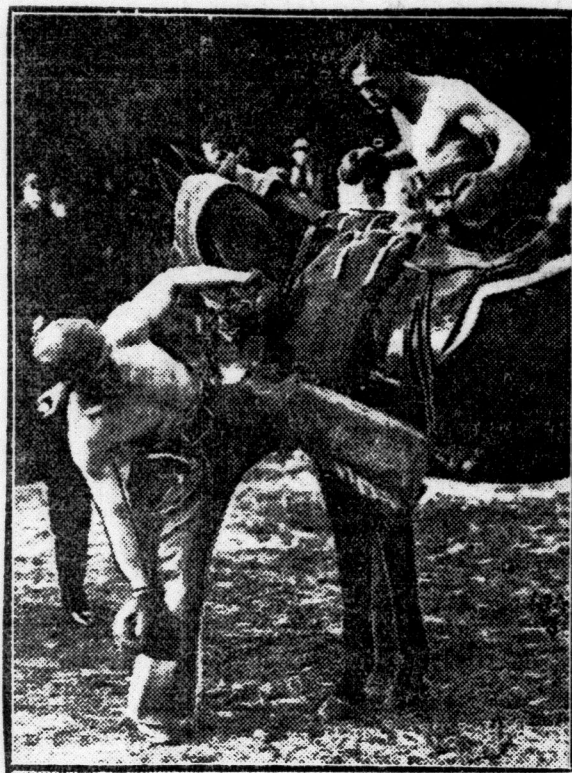

Fawn glazed shoes seen at the Longchamp races in Paris with spiral effect front and back.

Feodor Chaliapin, famous Russian baritone, who has just arrived on this continent.

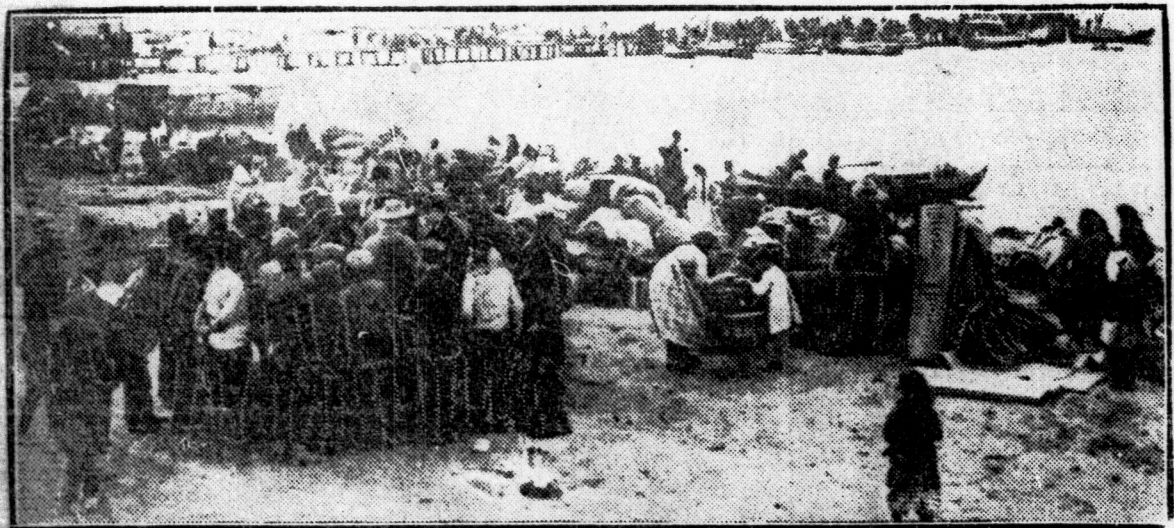

Rosette and Vivian Duncan arrive on the Olympic dressed in strange garb.

Now they box on horseback in Berlin. One man has been knocked off. Baron Von Meghe is refereeing the match.

Striking coal miners' children living in tents in Somerset county, Pa.

Refugees fleeing from Thrace when they heard that the Turks were going to return to that country.

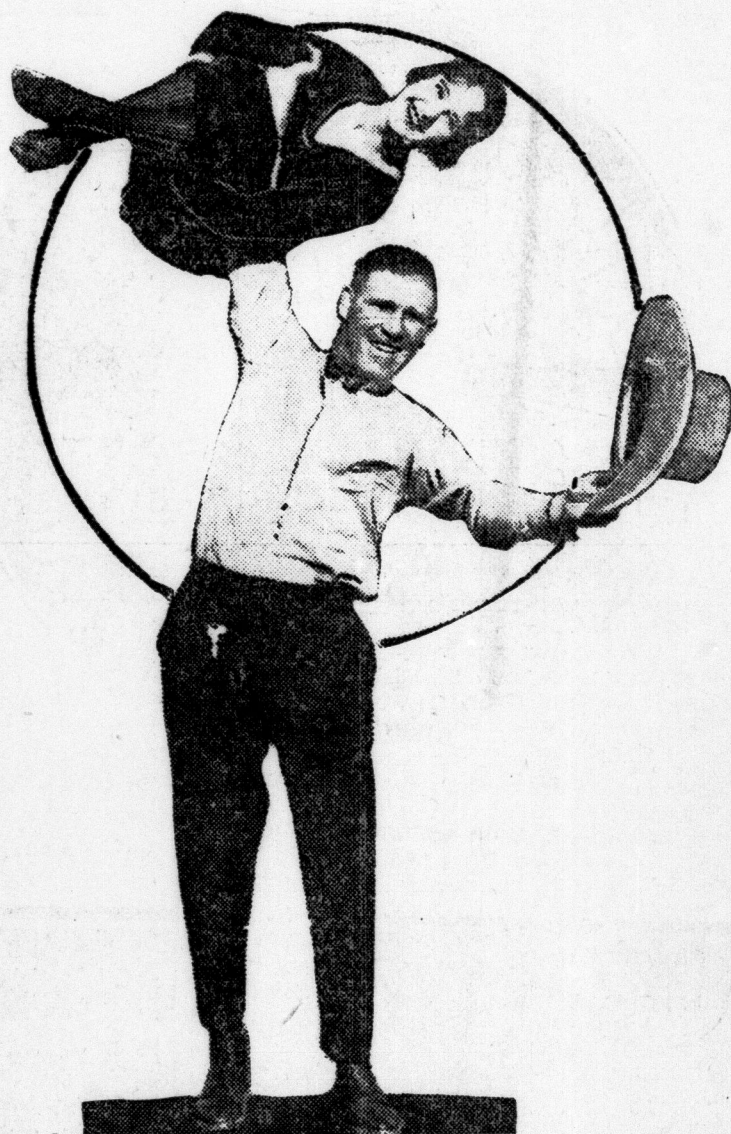

Miss Heather Thatcher (that's a new name for you) and Phyllis Garton in the "Cabaret Girl," a popular autumn show in London, England.

The Fairbank twins, scoring a big success in Paris, and planning next to visit London, England.

Miss Elizabeth Hanna, granddaughter of the late Mark Hanna, is Washington's youngest hostess.

Frank McCarroll gives his sister, Bonnie, a lift. They're "wild west" people.

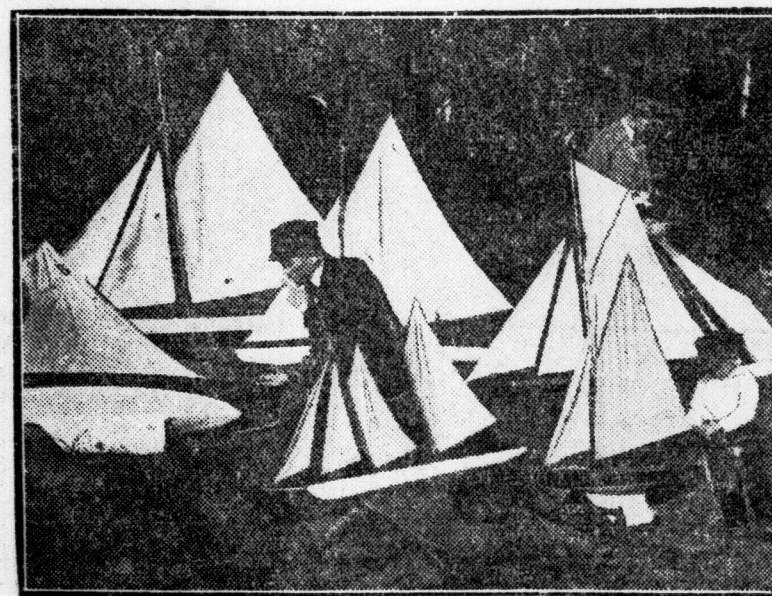

Is this the way you're going to look when you play hockey this winter? A men's fashion picture.

Sara Bernhardt, the great French tragedienne, has celebrated her 77th birthday. She is still planning new productions.

Prince Casimir Lubomirski, Polish ambassador to the U. S., and his wife, arriving on the Olympic.

Model yachts used in the numerous pond races in Berlin.

Kathleen Boland, sister of the late Harry Boland, Irish Republican leader, has come to this continent to make an appeal for the "Irish Republican soldiers and prisoners' dependents fund."

Alexander Hamilton of the Canadian customs office in Vancouver shot this shark, 12 feet 4 inches long, while it was swimming in Burrard Inlet. He saw its big fins near the surface when it was dangerously near longshoremen loading logs from a boom to the deck of the steamer Oridono Maru. Japanese in Vancouver are negotiating for the fins, which are edible.