The modes and materials of coming vogue are embodied in the dainty display, the crepes, nets, and embroidered voiles of Fashion's latest fancy being employed in the flounce and bolero effects that represent what is new in design. As for prices one little model in white batiste, with deep collar and short tunic exquisitely embroidered, a sash

Associated with "The Scribe" is a "The Shopper," who will personally select any merchandise desired by those who, for some reason, are not able to come to the Store to shop in person. "The Shopper" will answer by mcil any requests for information relative to style, prices, etc. Mark envelope "The Shopper."

Schoolgiri.—I am afraid that, if he knew, Lencardo da Vinci would be rather hurt at the "terrible hurry" in which you are writing his life and works. Bue probably arts and letters are accustomed to suffer in certain quarters when the skating is good. As far as your purse is concerned, this is the psychological moment in which to procure your information, because that series called "Masterpieces in Color," like so many other things material and aesthetic, has been reduced to half-price—to 18 cents a volume. Leonardo da Vinci is among the painters represented. This is the large, flat edition you mention—and charming books they are.

Peggy.—Hem the tablecloths and nap-kins along the two ends only. Curtains are usually classified among the general furnishings of the house.

Mrs. H. E. B.—A white quilt with self stripe border, to which bands of chintz might be added, as you suggest, can be supplied at $1.60. It is 5 feet 3 inches wide.

"Orillia."—And doesn't a whole continent of comfort lie in that extra half size, if only our minds weren't too warped by vanity to realize it? If the revival of the normal waist-line might be followed by the return of the normal foot, Dame Fashion would really deserve the Legion of Honor. You deserve a measure of praise for the example you set, and I hope yours will be the smartest looking pair of boots in Orillia. They can be sent to you in patent leather with cloth or kid tops—a buttoned style with flexible turn soles, the price being $5.00. A boot of similar type with light welt soles can be supplied at prices ranging from $4.50 to $10.00. The latter amount procures "The Fifth Avenue"—a marvel of good line and good fit.
