1546 COOK'S THIRD AND LAST VOYAGE

The other fact, which the writer took pains to determine, was, whether the beaftly cuftom imputed to them, of gratyfying their paffions without regard. to perfons or places, was well founded ? And he folemnly declares, that the groffeft indecencies he ever faw practifed while on the ifland, were by the licentioufnefs of our own people, who, without regard to character, made no fcruple to attempt openly and by force, what they were unable to effect with the free voluntary confent of the objects of their defire; for which feveral of them were feverely punished. To affort, therefore, that not the least trace of shame is to be found among these people in doing that openly, which all other people are naturally induced to hide, is an injurious calumny, not warranted by cuftom, nor fupported by the general practice, even of the lowest class of individuals among them. This people, concludes our journalift, have one cuftom in common with the Neapolitans and Maltefe, which ought not to be forgotten, and that is, their fishing in the night, and reposing themselves in the day; like them too, they burn torches while they fifh, which they make of the oil drawn from the cocoanut as the state of the last in the state of the (Lagar) F. B. A. G. angl. 100 (1900) and the first of the state of

Vol. 10V

(A) for a law for fight on the first of the comparison of the c

as is a star

the state of the state of the state