HELENE'S MARRIED LIFE

BY MAY CHRISTIE

XXXIX.—Jim Asks for a Gift.

I stood there, rooted to the spot. At last Jim knew me. He had called me by name. "Helene," he said. His memory had returned to him. He wanted me—his wife—his acknowledged wife. Again he called, quite softly. "What you come in—and talk to me Helene." Clutching the armful of violets, and with a gasp, I stumbled blindly into the room. Jim was alone. Alone with the flickering firelight and his thoughts. "These thoughts had surely turned to me—at last. How else had he known my name or the fact that I was passing by his door?" I paused upon the hearth rug, silent, gazing at Jim's face, dark eyes turned on me. And he was smiling. I crushed down a mad impulse to run towards him, there and then, to take him in my arms, and tell him how I loved him, yearned over him. "I must apologize—for calling you Helene," he said weakly. "It—it was a slip of the tongue. But then, you see, he smiled a little whimsically. 'I don't know you by any other name at all.' I felt the blood leave my foolish heart. What did he mean? I stood there, dumbly. 'You—you aren't angry?' went on the attractive voice, a pleading note in it. 'I wish to offend you for the world! Believe that, please.' I woke to speech. 'I thought you called me Helene because you knew me—recognized me.' I cried, stupidly. 'Wasn't that the reason?' 'Of course, I recognize you. I—I couldn't possibly forget you—in this short space of time!' Jim's tones were those of respectful admiration. Defiant—nothing more! 'I saw you for the first time—yesterday, wasn't it? Or the day before?' My head—'The woman in me rose to crush down my utter disappointment. Jim's health—it must come far ahead of my own selfish longings. I mustn't try to raise up memories that might be hurtful to him! 'Oh, I must go,' I cried softly, gently. 'I'm only exciting you. And you ought to keep quiet. Nurse will be furious if she finds me here.' 'Confound nurse, then!' Some of Jim's old obstinacy was on his face now. 'Stay just for a moment, Miss Helene. And—won't you tell me what your last name really is? I'd love to hear it.' Of all stabs, this was the keenest and the surest! My 'last name'—and he'd 'love to hear it.' Why, St. Aubyn—his own name—was mine! Rightfully, legally and ethically, it was Mrs. Jim St. Aubyn! And yet I dare not tell him go! 'Helene Beauchamp,' that's what I called. 'Helene Beauchamp,' Jim reiterated the words as he smiled. 'Indeed, spoken with the cadence that he gave to it, it was in truth a lovely name.' 'It seems vaguely familiar, too,' he proceeded. 'Wasn't there—up in town

Perth

Mr. W. J. Wilson, Grocer, Perth, Ont., writes:—

"In fitting up this building for a grocery business, I worked very hard, and after putting in my stock I continued plugging away good and hard too. I commenced to feel myself going down—my weight went from 180 pounds down to 154 pounds. My appetite began to fail, and of course upon retiring I could not get a good night's rest. Sometimes after going to sleep, my nerves would twitch and I would wake up with a start, and then lie awake for hours. I remembered having used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I started in again, and took a good treatment, using about half a dozen boxes. I soon felt my appetite returning, I could sleep well, and commenced gaining in weight, until I felt like a new man. From the benefits I have received from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I cannot speak too highly of them."

Trenton

Mrs. Chas. Lafferty, King St., Trenton, Ont., writes:—

"For some time I was troubled with nervousness, could not sleep well, and was in a generally run-down condition. I used to take dizzy spells and sometimes was so bad that I was afraid to walk on the street. A friend of mine had been using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with such good results that I commenced using them, too. I think I used about five boxes in all, and can say that I am now in much better health, can eat and sleep fine, and do not feel that dizziness I used to. I am stronger and better in every way, and even my friends remark how much better I look. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me much good that I cannot so praise this wonderful medicine too highly."

Was All Run-Down

Petrolea

Mrs. John Smith, Box 238, Petrolea, Ont., writes:—

"It is 27 years since I first made use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. At that time I was all run-down and went away from home to rest. While away, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, was recommended to me, so in an effort to recover, I tried it. I took six boxes, and in a few weeks I was completely well again. Since then I have had occasion to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food several times. Once after an operation I used this treatment as a tonic for extreme weakness, and it quickly restored me to health. I used it again when suffering from nervous prostration, and it brought back my health and strength. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to a great many people, who have taken it with good results, and I would advise anyone suffering from run-down system or nervousness of any description to give this treatment a faithful trial. 'I might say also, that we have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Liver Cure in our household with splendid results, while we always keep his Ointment on hand as a never-failing remedy."

But where there is life, there is hope. And if you go about it properly, you can restore the wasted nerves and bring back vigor to the human system. A little patience will be necessary, a little persistence in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for nervous troubles are not overcome in a day. There will be days when you feel better and other discouraging days. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is bound to benefit you because it supplies in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements with which Nature builds up rich blood and vital nerve force.

—some actress of that name?"

"This, too, was a stab. He could remember the actress, and forget the woman!"

"I've been on the stage for several years," answered Helene. "My name has been greatly advertised. Jim closed his eyes for a moment. 'Please take those flowers I said, quite gently.' 'Just a moment, please. I'm drinking in the glorious picture that you make, standing beside the leaping flames in that rose-colored frock. You're wonderful. Helene Beauchamp! No—don't be angry. A sick man's fancies must be humored.' 'Academy came that whimsical, attractive smile of him. Dear Jim! But it was as the actress in me that he looked for—not the woman! And my heart contracted.

"Violet carnations—and the prettiest flower of all!" He gave a feeble little laugh that held a pathos in it. "Quite poetic, am I not?"

"Oh, I must go," I murmured. "Nurse will say."

"Can't you leave something of yourself behind, so that I won't be lonely?" He raised himself on one elbow, and regarded me with a close, close gaze.

I flushed. I moved over towards him and laid my head close beside his. They filled the room with fragrance. "Please take those flowers I said, quite gently. 'They're all that I can give—although I wish it could be more.' I hurried from the room, and almost ran down the staircase to the dining-room.

There I found Alice, her husband, and Mr. Travis Lloyd. "Late, as usual, Helene," said my hostess, with mock severity, as I shook hands with Mr. Lloyd. "But the effect is worth it!" remarked Alice's kindly husband. "Helene looks charming!"

"I'm delighted over this arrangement," he whispered, as we attacked our oysters and hors-d'oeuvres. "It gives me something that I rarely get these days—a chance of a tête-à-tête with you alone."

"I'm not particularly interesting company," I rejoined in a light tone that was meant to be a joke. "And, besides, tonight I am really hungry."

"I'm not just a fancy of mine, Helene," I said, looking at him, roving glance, and awaited a question that was not to be asked.

"I'd hoped that you would wear my gift this evening," Miss Helene, he said. "I chose them specially for you—did you receive them?"

STEVENSON MOTION STAYS

London Member's Resolution About St. Lawrence Canals Stands.

[Special to The Advertiser.] TORONTO, March 29.—The matter of the St. Lawrence and Black Sturgeon River timber limits, which involve a big hydro problem, is to come up in the Legislature for an open discussion. There has been a row for months about these limits, involving not only the companies, but also the municipalities in the vicinity of the St. Lawrence and Black Sturgeon River.

Premier Drury wanted Mr. Dewar to withdraw his motion, which would sell the limits again, taking proceeds from the present holders. Mr. Dewar informed the premier that he wasn't thinking of the hydro end, and the premier withdrew his objection. It is expected, however, that the hydro end will creep into the argument when it comes up in the Legislature.

Dr. Stevenson of London didn't want to withdraw his motion about the St. Lawrence waterways and power development, which the premier requested. Hon. G. H. Ferguson backed the London Labor members and the motion was carried. It is expected, however, that the hydro end will creep into the argument when it comes up in the Legislature.

second reading. "The minister can press his second reading," declared Hon. Mr. Ferguson, "but it is against all custom and procedure of the Legislature since I have known anything about it."

The minister of agriculture went into the general situation under which shippers of cream send their product to the creameries, and at the end of two weeks or so receive a statement of the amount of cream percentage. For years, he pointed out, the producers had been compelled to accept the creameries' estimate as correct. The act provided machinery to appoint inspectors to take samples of milk or cream bought on a butter-fat basis, and make tests checking up the commercial tests and eventually to communicate with the producers in order to compare the two calculations.

"The bill," he said "has the support of most of the larger creameries in the province." He told the House of a conversation with the principal of the largest receiver in the province, in which the creamery man told him his concern had endeavored to ascertain if the buying agent were dealing fairly with the farmers in his payments to them. They were never able, the minister was informed, to look at the buying agents' books.

Enter T. and N. O. Railway. From the economic standpoint alone, declared Mr. R. R. Hall (Perry Sound), in introducing his motion favoring the extension of the T. and N. O. from North Bay to Perry Sound, the venture would be justified. If the railway were brought down to Georgian Bay somewhere near Perry Sound, it would benefit not only the province of Ontario, but the whole of the Dominion of Canada.

Hon. Mr. Raney moved the adjournment of the debate on the motion. When Attorney-General Raney introduced his bill abolishing appeals to the Privy Council, Hon. Mr. Ferguson asked if the bill wiped out all appeals.

"Yes," replied the attorney-general. "Nearly all appeals from Ontario. It repeals the present act and also abolishes the prerogative, leaving the only course of litigation by way of appeal from the judgment of the appellate division to the supreme court at Ottawa."

Mr. Ferguson: "Constitutional questions?"

Mr. Raney: "Everything."

The Legislature went on the defensive against criticism that it was passing the debate on the reply to the speech from the throne and wasting time talking. The premier and two leaders of the Opposition parties all got into it and put up an argument that time wasn't being wasted. The discussion arose when Hon. G. Howard Ferguson arose on a point of privilege and read an editorial from the Toronto Star, which was critical on the debate. He referred to the editorial as "Almost scurrilous in character." He didn't know a journal that wasted so much space in twists and tortures of that attitude of the House than the Star.

"When I come to point where it results every member of the House it is time to call attention to the fact," said the Conservative leader.

He declared that there had been little government legislation ready to proceed with. It took a long time to prepare legislation. The private members were not responsible.

Mr. Dewar supplemented what the Conservative leader had said and praised the character of the debate. He declared that it had been concise and educational. He was sure that no time had been wasted. The Liberal members had been concise and got to the point.

Adds Word of Approval. "I wish to add my word of approval," said Premier Drury.

"I do not think any one can say we wasted time. The whole air has been cleared. Any delay is not due to lack of program of legislation by the Government. I think we can point to fair progress."

The House, he said, would assert its right to a full and free discussion of its affairs.

Hon. R. M. Grant, in reply to questions, said the number contributing to the Government superannuation fund was: Public school teachers, 16,001; high school teachers, 1,217; public and high school inspectors, 301. Amount paid in public school teachers, $499,023; high school teachers, $90,611; inspectors, $14,588. The amount standing to the credit of the fund is $310,550.

The estimated cost of the last general election is one million dollars, according to Hon. W. E. Itaney, replying to a question. The amount actually paid over was $760,000, or this $240,000 was for enumerators, and $190,000 for printing lists, etc.

Edward J. Stephenson, the returned man who opposed Premier Drury in the by-election in Halton County, alleged irregularities in connection with the election, and he endeavored to have a petition against the premier's election tabled in the Legislature. He was told that this was impossible, and that any action he might take must be through the courts.
