GOOD POLICY TO KEEP SHEEP ON THE FARM

Every farmer should have his own flock—a good paying proposition.

Every farmer should have a few sheep. Weeds do not need to be trimmed in a sheep pasture. It is almost impossible for weeds such as cow hick and burdock to get any headway whatever when sheep are around. They will keep them trimmed to the ground, and none of them will get a chance to seed. Sheep are splendid for running over the stubble fields; they turn into money what would otherwise have gone to waste. They will even lick pest up off the ground. And, again, what would we do in this cold country of ours without woolen clothes? Sheep furnish us with both food and clothing. Some say sheep are hard on pasture, and cattle will not pasture with them. Perhaps they are hard on pasture, but not nearly to the extent that some people think. A good many farmers do not have enough pasture for their other stock. Then, when it becomes short, if there are sheep around, the sheep get the blame for it. Of course sheep can graze closer than any other animal, and when pasture becomes short and dry, there is very little growth, the sheep get ahead in the race.

It is a good policy to have a rough or old pasture for the sheep. Keep them on this and by themselves until some of the harvest is off. Then they will feed on the stubble and not bother the pasture very much. It is not advisable to keep too many sheep, about 10 or 12 breeding ewes on the average 10-acre farm are enough; that is, where mixed farming is practiced. Clover hay is the ideal feed for winter feeding. A feed of pea straw may be given once a day. If no clover hay is to be had, give good pea straw, well threshed, with a few turnips—not more than one fair-sized one to each ewe with a little timothy once a day and a light grain feed each day. If any clover is being fed, don't feed roots. They have a bad effect on the lambs. They will be very large and weak. Better save the roots until the lambs come, or until a few days before; they will help the milk supply. Give the ewes plenty of exercise. Feed in the open on the snow or dry ground. Let them run out and in as they wish. They will care for themselves.

MEXICAN DEMAND FOR ALBERTA RED.

No question at the present time is of greater importance to the Alberta husbandman than the west as an outlet for Alberta's products. The province is the main source of supply for the high freight charges as long as the products are shipped eastward. Un- doubtedly this difficulty is overcome it will be important to the Alberta husbandman to get his products to the American continent. Alberta is a province of profitable crop yields, but it is not possible to depend on these yields to make up a vast difference in freight. If Alberta lands are to compete with other grain raising districts, says The Farmers' Advocate, a permanent market is required by some to be uncertain and fluctuating. The government of that country has placed a duty on foreign wheat which duty is maintained only so long each year as the home product fills the requirements of the country, after which foreign grains enter free.

HOG NOTES.
 The large sow has strength in her to carry the litter till they can depend on their own feeding, and this without reducing her to a shadow.

No matter how well bred the sow may be or how careful she is mated to a good boar, unless she is given the treatment during gestation, and then so well fed after farrowing as to be able to keep her litter of pigs growing well from the start, she will produce a failure.

Under average conditions on the farm it is nearly always best to keep the farrowing sows confined in a lot while the pigs suckle. The pigs have made a sufficient growth to run about and in some measure at least take care of themselves. If turned out too young they are liable to be injured by the other hogs.

It is a fairly safe rule to select a sow for a breeder from a large litter of piglets that have had an average size born from a similar family. It is reasonably certain that a sow is a good milker, if she raises a good number of pigs and does it well. Her milk qualities may not be transmitted to her offspring, but the chances are very much in her favor.

When the sows and their litters are all fed together, with the aim to give all that they want, there is a chance that they will carry more flesh than they need, and the pigs will not be as well as they would if fed alone, bringing loss to the owner in both cases.

HENS ENTER CONTEST.
 The hens have apparently entered into the spirit of the egg-laying contest, and reports of the laying of exceptionally large eggs continue to come in.

The latest report is from G. V. St. John, who owns a Black Minorca hen that has laid an egg six inches long by six and a half inches, with a weight of four and a half ounces. This is the largest egg that has been reported. Surely the hens are making great efforts along the line of egg appreciation.

Foreign Crop Summary.
 J. P. Bickell & Co. furnish the following European crop summary:
 United Kingdom—The crop already seeded is showing a poor growth as the weather is very unfavorable for germinating, it being too cold. The average is smaller than last year.

France—There are some complaints heard regarding some damage from frost in the plant. The plant shows poor growth in some parts, and these complaints are increasing. The weather is cold for this season.

Germany—Some anxiety is being felt regarding the outlook for the plant, owing to the cold weather, and the fact that the supplies of native wheat are rather small. There is an improved foreign demand.

Roumania—The crop outlook continues favorable, and weather seasonable.

Bulgaria and Turkey—The outlook for both winter and spring wheat is favorable.

Italy—There are no complaints heard regarding the outlook for cereals, although the weather continues wintry.

Russia—in the southwest reports are varied, but mostly favorable. In the northeast the outlook is improving owing to beneficial rains. Arrivals at the ports continue light, although interior stocks are reported on the snow or dry ground.

Hungary—The crop outlook continues unfavorable, the weather is cold, but there is plenty of snow covering.

Spain—A moderate improvement has been noted during the week as a result of good rains.

Argentina—The fleet at the ports loading is still small. Arrivals from the interior are still small and the quality is poor.

India—Offerings of new crop wheat are very light and sellers are very firm.
