SALVATIONISTS WERE ATTACKED

There was a disagreeable scene on Charlotte street last night about 12 o'clock when a number of rowdy youths assaulted some of the Salvation Army bandmen.

The bandmen who are visiting here in connection with the annual congress of the army, were returning from a meeting, accompanied by some ladies, to their lodgings and in passing the Alarct building, a number of youths who evidently had been drinking enough to make them feel fresh, approached from the opposite direction and made some insulting remarks.

The bandmen were mostly Englishmen who came from the old country as immigrants and had they been so minded would probably have made their assailants look like thirty cents, if they had returned the attack in kind.
