GERMAN PEACE TALK.

Germany is preparing for another peace note. This is clear from the speeches in the Reichstag and the comment of German newspapers on President Wilson's terse reply to the recent suggestion for a peace conference made through Austria. In fact, we may expect several peace notes before the beginning of the spring campaign. In the meantime enemy propagandists will be busy in every Allied country in their insidious attempts to undermine the grim determination which is carrying the nations of the Entente on to a glorious victory.

Count Von Hertling, the German imperial chancellor, complains bitterly because President Wilson has not given greater consideration to his suggestion that peace should be discussed on the basis of the four points of the President's message in February last; but his complaints will not help Germany. Count Von Hertling knows now, and his government must know, that peace by negotiation is impossible. The Allies have given their answer and the battle must go on until Germany's military power is smashed. Her promises count for nothing; she can be dealt with only in one way. That way the Allies have decided to take, and they will not be turned aside from their common purpose. The fine words of the enemy statesmen do not harmonize with the atrocities committed by their soldiers and their U-boats, and their power to threaten mankind, either in a military or naval sense, must be removed on the field of battle before there can be any serious discussion of peace.

Meanwhile, it is well for us to remember that the talk of pacifists must have no place in the countries of the Entente while our armies are bleeding and dying for the cause which must triumph if civilization is to live.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

The Kaiser in his interview published the other day expressed his righteous horror at the dreadful doings of England in Russia. He was shocked to think that a parliamentary-governed country like England would seek the overthrow of the admirable parliamentary government inaugurated by his democratic friends Lenin and Trotsky in Russia. The ex-empire murders ordered by wholesale by these gifted leaders of a free people, including the murder and mutilation of the body of a British naval attaché, to say nothing of the assassination of the former Czar and members of his family, made a most favorable impression on the mind of the Kaiser. He wants more of them, and therefore resents the interference of the meddling Englishmen and Yankees.

Of course the Kaiser has a Russian policy. He is the only friend of Russian democratic government. Perhaps we cannot better explain his benevolent intentions and noble acts than in the words of Mr. Balfour, in a speech from which quotations have already appeared in this paper. Mr. Balfour, discussing German policy in Russia, said:

"Then do hon. gentlemen think that Germany is ready to abandon her Russian policy? That policy has been most astute and at first sight the most successful—indeed the only really successful thing she has done during the war, and she is proportionately proud of it. But what does it mean for a very large fraction of the human race? Does this house contemplate with equanimity this row of subordinate states under German domination, feeding German trade though starved themselves, supplying Germany with armies in quarrels with which they have no concern, and stretching from the Baltic right down to the Black Sea? Further, do they contemplate with equanimity one of the inevitable results of that, which is that Russia will be cut off from all direct intercourse with her western friends, and that the task of the self-rehabilitation and self-reconstruction which we all earnestly desire that Russia should carry through—do they contemplate with equanimity that that task should be almost impossible? Germany rejoices that Russia is going to be little more than the hinterland of her own dominating influence. I think it a calamity to mankind, but unless Germany's methods change and Germany's heart changes, or unless a victory—a complete victory—on the part of the associated powers convinces everybody in Germany that, whether they will it or no, their policy is a failure—unless one of those two things happens, I fail utterly to see how this great rehabilitation of Russia is ever to take place."

"The hon. gentlemen, who, I believe, quite sincerely and earnestly desire the peaceful progress of the human race, seem to be quite incapable of appreciating the magnitude of the obstacle which Germany presents to the realization of their own ideals. They desire it; or, terms which would not merely make a future war practically inevitable, but would leave an immense fraction of civilized mankind absolutely under the German heel, absolutely incapable, therefore, of carrying out their own development in their own way, and which would put back the whole progress of civilization, which, as I believe, consists in the growing friendly intercourse between nation and nation of such a kind that while each influences the other, each may nevertheless, in conformity with its own character, its own history, its own national aspirations, give to the common task that work which they are best fitted to carry out. The ideal will never and cannot be carried out so long as our treaties of Brest-Litovsk remain untouched, or if you contemplate giving back to Germany her possessions in Africa, or if you mean to give back to Turkey the Arab districts which are now happily relieved from Turkish rule."

The discriminating reader will have no difficulty in deciding whether British or German policy in Russia is best for the Russian people. If Germany could control Russia and fill her armies with Russian recruits having their country as a great storehouse of supplies, the world's peace would soon be shattered again, and the western nations forced to battle for their existence. The risk is too great. The Allies must save Russia.

"We have passed over the crest," says Field Marshal Foch in an interview. He rarely speaks for publication and so his words are doubly forceful. He bids the Allied peoples be patient for, he says, "You must not think that we shall get to the Rhine immediately." But in his brief talk to the newspapers he declares the enemy shaken up and shaken down, and his words are of good cheer. A speech by Von Hertling in the Reichstag is in striking contrast.

"We will never let Frenchmen or Americans through here," was a boastful promise given Emperor William by his troops when he visited the Alsace-Lorraine front on September 19 and 20. The test is still to come at that point and the Allies will doubt if the German promise will be made good.

The people of the United States are called on for not less than six billions of dollars in the next Liberty Loan. The campaign will soon be on. It is a great sum to raise but they are doing big things across the border and it is safe to say that the expectations of Mr. McAdoo will be realized.

We are learning very early in the "patriotic potato" inquiry why the government was unduly of having the facts made known. The opening day's sessions have justified the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the whole matter.

Canadian nurses have won renown in the war as well as their fighting brothers. Promotion of Miss McKel of Fairville and the award of the military medal to Miss Urquhart of Nova Scotia are pleasing items in the news of the day.

Archbishop Ireland is dead. His death, following so soon upon the passing of Cardinal Farley, the Catholic church in the United States has suffered the loss of two prelates of outstanding prominence.

The success of General Allenby's master stroke in Palestine is now discussed as being unexcelled in history.

EX-SENATOR JONES, LABOR LEADER, ADVISES AGAINST AFFILIATION

Ex-senator Samuel A. Jones, of New Brunswick, N. Y., who was in the city for the last few days, left last evening for Ottawa. Prior to his departure he spoke about the present trouble existing between the commissioners and the trades and labor organizations in the city. He said that instead of a recall a public hearing might have been taken on the question whether the police, in justice to a community, could affiliate with the Trades and Labor Congress. His personal opinion was "any police organization might form a union, but should not affiliate with the Trades and Labor Council. He considered it would be detrimental to citizens as that barrier existing between the lawless element and the law-abiding element was broken down by such affiliation, in case of general strikes, in which the men were called out, and the safety of a community was then in jeopardy."

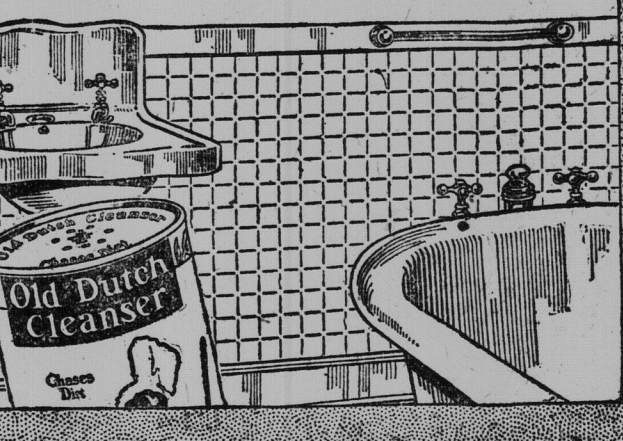

He said he was a friend of labor, but personal knowledge of labor affairs had taught him to weigh matters and base the least causes on principle alone and forget personal prejudice or feeling. He expressed the wish that an amicable settlement would come about in the near future.

PRESENTATION TO BRIDE AND GROOM.

The home of Mrs. Edward Duff, Main street, Fairville, was invaded last evening by a merry party consisting of the bride, the bridegroom, and several of their friends, in honor of Gunner and Mrs. Harper Henderson, who have recently returned after their honeymoon. Dancing and games were enjoyed and during the evening James E. Bryant, on behalf of the lodge, presented to the young people, both of whom are members of the lodge, a handsome silver set, as a token of the esteem in which they are held. A little before midnight refreshments were served by the ladies, and the National Anthem was sung, after which the gathering broke up with the hearty appreciation of all for the very pleasant evening spent.

A Profitable Meal.

The members of the club were telling yarns, when the quiet man in the corner was asked to contribute.

"Well," said he, "I once entered a restaurant where they weigh you before eating and then after eating, and then charge you by weight. I had a good feed and was charged ten shillings. The next time I went I took in my pockets bricks, weights, old iron and such like, and was weighed and then went upstairs and had a banquet three times as big as the last. I went down and was weighed again, but they couldn't make it out."

"Couldn't make what out?" asked the club members.

"Why," answered the quiet man, "they owed me four-and-tuppence."

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommend Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble. Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis, food fermenting and souring, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Blaud's Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and liquid right out of the body, soothe the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Blaud's Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HOW COL. MCKENZIE MET HIS DEATH

Capt. A. L. Barry of Newcastle in a letter to his wife gives further particulars regarding the death of Lieut.-Col. A. E. G. McKenzie, O. C. the 28th Battalion. He said that he was acting staff captain to the colonel. They were both standing talking when the colonel was caught in machine gun fire. He himself was thrown to the ground with the concussion.

Other Casualties.

Rev. J. A. Trudel, curate of St. Mary's church in Newcastle, was advised recently that his youngest brother, Private Omer Trudel, had given his life. At the time of enlisting he was a student in college.

Lieut.-Colonel Ings, formerly commander of the 100th Battalion, now at his home in Charlottetown, has been advised that his son, Lieutenant Ings, has been killed in action.

Charles Ingh of Doodtown was notified last night that his brother, Private Peter Ingh, had been killed in action. Private Ingh was a native of St. John's.

Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery McLeod of Nelson were advised recently that their son, Private James McLeod, had been killed in action.

The names of eleven New Brunswick men appear in the midnight casualty list. They are as follows: Wounded: W. Spencer, Riverside; J. J. Losier, Tracadie; E. W. Knapp, Seckville; H. T. Frost, Oak Point; C. L. Gorman, St. John. Killed in action: H. E. Young, Milltown. Gassed: A. W. Snare, Fredericton; C. Anderson, Chatham. Ill: G. W. Allen, Bayfield; J. F. Gilbert, St. John.

MISS MCKEL PROMOTED.

Word was received by relatives in Fairville, yesterday, saying that Nurse Sister Theodora R. McKel had been appointed temporary matron of Hospital No. 13, at Hastings (England). Miss McKel was decorated not long ago by His Majesty, King George, with the Royal Red Cross, the highest decoration which can be bestowed on a nursing sister. Miss McKel has many friends in St. John and Fairville who will be glad to hear of her further advancement in her profession.

GROWING DEAF WITH HEAD NOISES? TRY THIS

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength), and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Closed nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with Catarrhal Deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

TIMBER SALE

The lands which were advertised for sale on the 25th of September, 1918, and postponed, will now be held at the Crown Land Office, Fredericton, N. B., on Thursday, the third day of October, 1918, commencing at 12 o'clock noon under the following conditions, viz:
