Lawrence O'Connor Doyle.

The reading public of this province and city are under no light obligations to Mr. George Mullane, of this city, for the patient research and literary talent with which he has brought to light and placed before us in attractive form events and actors in our provincial history in danger of passing to oblivion. His pleasing and eadable chapters on the historic reminis-ences of the country around Bedford Basin constituted a really important con-tribution to local history. Still further persuing his favourite work, he has now resented us with a most perusable and astructive booklet on the Richard Brinsley Sheridan of Nova Scotia, Lawrence O'Connor Doyle. Brilliant though his talents were and great though his ser vices were to his native province, yet it has been the fate of Doyle to be well-nigh forgotten within the pace of two generations which have elapsed since his death. Yet he was unquestionably a man of great talent and his services to his native province were invaluable. 3prung of merchantile parentage, he was born in 1804, the same year in which Joseph Howe first saw the light. At the time of his birth and for many years afterwards, Catholics laboured under the old penal regime, and could neither vote at elections, sit in parisment, nor attend any of the then existing institutions of higher education withou practically forewearing their religion Young "Larry" was therefore compelle to go abroad for his education. Mr. Mullane says probably to Stonyhurst College in England. While there he wrote and published a short poem on the death of his friend, the amiable and brilliant Bishop Burke of Halifax. There was nothing remarkable about the verses except perhaps the age of the writer, a little over sixteen. Returning to Nova Seotla he began the study of law and entered with considerable cleverness into the religious controversies of the times. He was articled for five years in the office General. In 1829, in company with Martin J. Wilkins, John C. Halliburton and Stephen H. Moore, he was admitted to the Bar, being the first Catholic in the pro-vince to be so honored. He had always peen interested in matters political and the way for the admission of Catholics to the Assembly having been opened a few years previously by Lawrence Kavanagh,

In fact, he seemed to see aimost everything through humourous spectacles, and many a carefully-repeared and dramatically-delivered oration was delivered over to the inextinguishable laughter of the members by some sidespiltzing sally from the beaming-faced, round-visaged, broad-shouldered, green-coated representative from Arichat. I am quite sure if he lived so long the last trump would drown the ring of merry voices over his last jest."

Doyle law office was at the corner of Sackville and Granville Streets, his pattner being Mr. Twining. Not long after his marriage, his wife died at the age of 37 years, and the blow seems to have made Doyle lose almost all ambition and become careless to fame and fortune from that time ouward.

JUDGES ADMITTED MISTAKE.

FREDERIOTON, Sept. 19.—Thers was a new development in the case of the Patchen Lady and her owner, L. B. C. Phair, the mare having been expelled for life on Wednesday.

Following a conference, Phair went to the pudges stand and apologized for having led his mare off the track during the race. Then H. H. Lee, of Augusta, Me., made a statement on behalf of himself and judges, admitting they had made a mistake in removing Driver Raymond from behind Patchen Lady. He then said the judges lifted the expulsion, but owner and mare were suspended until a fine of $100 was paid. Phair then grabbed the megaphone, and, while his friends applanded, he said: and, while his friends applauded, he said; and, refuse to pay the $100. They led me into a trap. They told me that if I would apologize there would be no fine."

MISCELLANEOUS, H. H. Lee, Augusta, Me., one of the Frederloton judges will start at Chatham, N. B., next week. Frank J. Power will start at Charlottetown. Wolverton, who formerly drove Frank-Patch, drove Leals Patch in the 2.14 pace, at Detroit, Thursday.
