The following is taken from the last Richibucto Review: On Monday evening J. &. T. Jardine received a telegram from Captain Thompson of the bark Sagona, which is loading at Darien, Ga., announcing that Captain McLean, Second Mate Lynch and Chas. Rhodes of the bark Valona have been missing since Thursday last. The Valona was loaded at Sapolo Island, and the captain and the above named seamen started to go up to Darien, a distance of about twenty miles, to clear the ship. It is thought that the boat has upset and the crew are lost; still there is a possibility that they are yet safe and may turn up all right: Capt. McLean is well known here. Last year he sailed the tug Calluna, for G. W. Robertson, and has commanded the Valona since was taken off the south beach last summer. Lynch, the second mate, is not known here, and Rhodes is a son of Wm. A. P. Rhodes, harness maker, of this place.

Last summer he noticed them in larger numbers and grown to four feet in length, still without the fin. Mr. Gates has an explanation. In the summer of 1893 he saw a statement in the Portland, Me., Transcript to the effect that a manager of a Cape Hatteras fishery had, three or four years before, sent out a few fish thus marked, merely as an experiment. At that time the few had increased to many, and now the finless tribe has grown in size, numbers and hatching grounds, till they are being found in Digby.-Courer.

It is the peculiarity of the nagge enormously exaggerate everything, even if she do not invent her grievances. Forgetfulness on the part of the husband is annoying, as it is in anyone, but it is not a crime. A continual stream of scolding, lasting three of four hours, over the failure to post a letter will cause any man consider the effect disproportion to the cause. If the husband be healthy, if he is not cursed with highly nervous organization, what happens? The first thing is, that any love he may have had for his wife dies, drowned in the floods of words Having murdered his love for her, the wife keeps up the nagging; he speedily begins to look on her as being a EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.
