STOPS CROOKED WORK.

"The man who has learned the priceless habit of never slighting his work, of always doing to a finish whatever he undertakes, has a perpetual tonic." The management of the Currier Business University, Limited, claims to have control of the only method of training for thoroughly instilling tonic into the pupils' makeup. This system was devised after years of work and numerous suggestions from scores of expert accountants, business and professional men, court stenographers, etc., under the supervision of the principal. The system is so perfect in its application that the school offers to forfeit the price of a course to anyone who can successfully operate an eroked work, such as copying from others, taking "tips" from students, stealing from prepared keys or any other of the many subterfuges so well known to other business college students.

This school offers one week's tuition free, at the end of which time, if pupil is accepted, a position worth from $300 to $800 per year, is guaranteed. Only one-half of the tuition fee is required in advance, the balance payable when position is accepted.

IN THE COURTS.

In the case of Loggie vs. Montgomery before Judge Barker this morning George Watt, collector of customs, Chatham, was examined. Dr. Pugsey then stated the grounds of the case. The argument of Mr. Teed was then heard. Mr. Teed asked that the bill be dismissed. He claimed that the judge had no right to issue an injunction but can give damages if he found the defendant guilty of any wrong. The argument will be continued this afternoon.

Before His Honor Judge Landry in the case of the Cushing Sulphite Co. appeal from the winding up order of Judge McLeod to the supreme court of N. B. was settled upon. The case of Rosebank Lumber Co. against John Buckley, D. J. Buckley and the Royal Bank of Canada was postponed.

OLD MAN ATTACKED BY THREE SAILORS.

Brutal Assault on Charles Murray Last Night.

Three Were Arrested and Tried This Morning—Eleven Other Prisoners Before the Magistrate

There were no less than eleven prisoners on the police court bench this morning. Of this number there were six drunks, three arrested for assault and two for furious driving.

The drunks were dealt with first. Andrew Irvine, George McQuillan and Chas. Crickley, who are old offenders, were each fined $5 each. Thomas Dunlop, who has been repeatedly before the court, was remanded for drunkenness until some enquiries could be made about him, and the magistrate told him he was liable to be sent to jail for six months without fine. Two plain drunks were fined four dollars each.

Fred King and George Record, charged with being so furiously driving on Carnarvon street, complained that the horses they were driving had hard mouths and they could not hold them in. They were asked to pay a fine of $3 each.

The magistrate here quoted the law showing that a horse must be driven through the streets at a moderate trot and round corners at a walk. He remarked that nearly every delivery team in the city was liable to be reported for not observing this law as they go round corners and across streets at a trot.

Mrs. Terris complained to the court that a dog owned by Mr. O'Leary had bitten her. O'Leary was present in court, and said he knew nothing of the affair until summoned to appear in court. He promised to do away with the dog and the matter was allowed to drop.

The most important case was that of assault preferred against Joseph Hughes, aged 34, of Nova Scotia; Wm. Martin, aged 23, of England; and Lawrence Olson, aged 21, of Norway. The three are seafaring men, and as far as the evidence goes they gave Charles Murray, an old man, a severe beating on his head, back, arms and legs, and a good chance of being severely dealt with.

The three men preferred to be tried in the police court, and the first witness called was Mr. Murray, who showed the court the beating given him. His nose, forehead, ear and side of the face were marked, and he also complained of his breast being sore. He said that last night, while upstairs in his house on Pond street, he heard a noise in his hall, and he went down to investigate. He found the three prisoners, whom he identified in court, at the door of an empty room. He told them that no person lived there and for them to get away out of that. They stood for a time pushing at the door, when Hughes said to him, "speak easy," and then Martin jumped forward and struck Hughes on the face. Witness said he then went towards Martin, when the latter gave him another blow on the face. At this stage of the evidence, Hughes jumped forward and said that he would fight the old man. Witness told them it was better for them to get away, and he went towards the Grand Union hotel to get a police officer.

Hughes followed him and told him not to go any farther or he would get something that would knock him down. Witness resumed his walk for an officer, when Hughes struck him on the forehead and then on the neck, and he did not know what happened after that. Witness did not know his assailants, but thought he had seen them about the city before.

Hughes was the spokesman for the party, and although very nervous he conducted a most rigid cross-examination in a manner that would do credit to a timid lawyer.

Harry Dryden, a boy living on Pond street, testified that he was looking out of a window in his home and saw Hughes strike the old man and knock him against the building. The other two men came up and struck the old man. Hughes ran away and witness followed him out to the police. Hughes had taken off his overcoat so witness wouldn't know him.

Adolphus Dryden, father of the last witness, was sworn, and said he heard the noise in the street and went to the window and saw the men. He heard the old man say, "Don't you strike me again." He then saw Hughes strike the old man on the face and knock him down, hit him after he was down and also kick at him. Witness, after getting on his shoes, ran to the old man's assistance, but the assailants had run away. He could see the assault plainly, as it was under an electric light. A young fellow named Gould also saw the assault, and it was he who gave the prisoners in charge of the police. The assault took place at nearly ten o'clock.

The prisoners did not wish to make any statements and were remanded until five o'clock this afternoon, when Gould's evidence will be taken.

So far it is not shown that Olsen struck the old man, but he threatened to and did not try to prevent the others from assaulting an old man, who is in the vicinity of 70 years of age.

Murray has a shoe repairing shop on Union street. He told the court that he did not wish to be hard on the men, but the magistrate said it was out of Murray's hands and that he would deal with the case.

A NEW KIND OF "OPENING"

M. R. A. Ltd., Will Hold an Exposition of Men's and Boys' Underwear Tomorrow—Special Clerks

Turn to page four of this issue. There is important news there for men and boys, or it may be for those who attend to shopping for the male members of the household.

We are now up to the middle of October. In a week or so heating stoves will be put in place, and every coal bin will be filled. Blankets are already on the beds. But there is doubtless one item that is more or less unattended to in every home, and that is proper underclothing for men and boys.

Saturday morning an Underwear Exposition will commence in Manchester, Robertson, Allison's Ltd., in the men's and boys' outfitting department, at which the most complete array of reliable winter shirts and drawers in Lower Canada will be on full view. There will be clerks enough to give every visitor careful attention.

It will be a special day, particularly set apart for a full and comprehensive showing and explaining of underwear. The prices are so gradual, and withal so moderate, that no buyer will regret making purchases. It is an opening for men of all walks in life, also the boys.

GEORGE WRIGHT DIES

VERY SUDDENLY.

George Wright, for years a resident of Rothesay, and a builder of more than ordinary ability, died very suddenly last night. Mr. Wright was between fifty and sixty years of age and was very highly esteemed in the community in which he lived. He took a very active part in politics, being a staunch Liberal and a strong supporter of Senator Donville.

Deceased leaves one son, an operator on the I. C. R., and one daughter, who resides with her father. Mr. Wright has not been well for some time, but his condition did not cause his family and friends any alarm. He was at work yesterday as usual and went to bed at his regular time last night. This morning when his daughter went to call him he was dead.

Common Clerk Wardropper, who is quite ill at his home, was reported slightly better this morning.

The many friends of Miss Lizzie Blair Olive, formerly of this city, now Mrs. Archibald Miller of Lynn, Mass., who will be remembered as the sweet soprano singer who has pleased so many St. John audiences some ten years ago, are welcoming her back to her home in this city. Mrs. Miller, who is now soloist at the First Universalist church, Lynn, is very prominent in the musical circles in Boston and vicinity.
