Children Have Catarrh.

As They Grow Older it Leads to Consumption and an Early Death-Many Saved by a Timely Use of Dr. Chase's.

For the beginning of consumption, which claims as its victims the young men and young women, we must go back to childhood when the careless boy or girl contracted 'a cold in the head' as the result of wet feet or exposure to cold and dampness.

sult of wet feet or exposure to cold and dampness.

A cold in the head very soon develops into chronic catarrh and neglected catarrh just as readily becomes consumption.

Mothers are learning to save their dear ones by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure the only catarrh remedy which can be successfully used for children.

The improved blower, which is given with each box of Dr. Chase's Catarrh cure is so simple that a child can use it, and so effective in sending the preparation to the diseased parts that relied is prompt and permanent cure is effected in a short time.

The right time to use Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure is when there is a cold in the head. A small quantity will quickly cure the cold in the head, clear the air passages and prevent further trouble and danger.

If the child is too small to use the blower the mother should blow the remedy into the nostril. The result cannot be otherwise than beneficial. Relief will be prompt and lasting.

Thus a Bad Smash-up Was Prevented When the Freight Train Broke in Two.

"That tribe of wandering gentlemen commonly called hobes are not as a general rule welcome passengers on freight trains," said the middle brake man of a long Royal Bee Line freight train waited from the siding for a firstclass train to pass. 'That ratiled me pretty well because it was a wet night and the brake wheels were slippery and I couldn't expect to set the brakes up very tight without the aft of a stick. But I started in to make the best effort I could, as every minute was precious, and the rear part of the train was gaining headway all the while and might overtake the head section. I didn't have much success in getting the brakes set, though, as my hands would allo off and the cars were going faster and faster down the bill. I could see signs of activity and moving lanterns back near the caboose, and is a minute I got a signal that the train was in three sections and I was on the middle section all alone. The chances were that I wouldn't be able to control the middle section without a stick. There wasn't any danger from being rammed by the rear section, as there were enough men there to keep that under control. The danger was that my section in its race down the hill would overtake the head end. I soon had most of the brakes set as tight as I could, but there was no apparent lessenling in the speed of the cars. I made up my mind that I had done about all that I could and began to look out for my own safety. It would be tempting fate to jump in the dark, so I started back to the rear car, thinking that I would get as far away from the point of danger as possible when the crash came.

'In jumping from a high box car to a coal dump my icot slipped and I landed on the coal all sprawled out flat. As my hands flew out when I struck one of them came in contact with a stick, or what I supposed was a stick, about the size of a brake stick. Well, maybe my heart didn't give a hop, skip and a jump for joy.

'I'll soon have this section stopped,' I said to myself, giving a jerk on the stick.

'Lego my leg, my peg leg,' a voice said in the

I soon set the brakes up so tight that the runaway section was quickly under my control, and after the other two sections were stopped we had no difficult in coupling up and getting going again. I took his hobolets back in the caboose and he had a good, comfortable berth in to Jersey.'
