DOVE OF PEACE NO LONGER HOVERS OVER BROADWAY

is Driven Off by Defiant Statement issued by Producing Managers.

New York, Aug. 21.—The dove of peace which hovered over street-bound Broadway today was driven off tonight by a defiance from the Producing Managers' Protective Association, which declared in a formal statement that it would never deal with an organization of "contract violators" like the Actors Equity Association.

Following a conference of representatives from the managers and actors with leading playwrights, a letter was announced by Eugene Walter, the chairman of the meeting.

Paul N. Harner, attorney for the Actors Equity Association, announced tonight that the association had turned out a statement that it does not intend to "close shop" or to deny employment to any actor who is not a member of the association.

Stage hands and musicians walked out of the Winter Garden tonight, but the closure was on the "contract-violator" association.

With a $200,000 fund at the disposal of the association, Harner said that the main object of a newly formed union of motion picture workers had applied for an American Federation of Labor charter.

U. S. CAVALRY HOT AFTER THE MEXICAN BANDITS

Spread Out Fan-Shaped Over a Wide Stretch of Country South of the Rio Grande, the American Horsemen Are Combing the Mountains for the Men Who Held Army Aviators For Ransom—Amount of Money Actually Paid Only $8,500.

Maria, Texas, Aug. 19.—Spread out fan-shaped over a wide stretch of Mexican country south of the Rio Grande, United States cavalry, aided by airmen and scouts, tonight are combing the mountains for the bandits who held the two American aviators for ransom.

The two lieutenants, H. B. Peterson and Paul N. Davis, for whom ransom was demanded, and who were released early today, studied the American in their quest of the outlaws.

With nearly six hours start on the punitive expedition, the bandits are believed to have retreated in the mountain passes and canyons, and it probably will be necessary to search every square mile of the rough country every square mile of the rough country below the border to find them, military men say.

And tonight's forlorn trail, it is feared, will obliterate the trail left by the bandits. It was not known tonight how many

LONDON AND PARIS LINKED DAILY BY AIR

British Delegates at Peace Conference Got English Papers by Midday.

MAIL IS SENT REGULARLY

Noyager Loses Fear of Danger After Initial Trip Over Channel—How Peace Envoy's Traveled.

London, Aug. 19.—(Correspondence)—Little attention has been paid to the fact that for six months a regular air service for mails and passengers has been in operation between London and Paris.

One looks upon incredibly straight lines, curves drawn with a compass, towns built on a gridiron, the bricks on the chimney tops. The sun, 100,000 feet high, is a great circle of light, and the open fields of France, with their brown and green and yellow, lie like a patchwork quilt of the shades known as "art" shades.

It is all as pretty as a Japanese fan, but one quickly tires of it as one tires of the successful regular human countenance. We realize that inequality, a touch of the uncouth and unspoiled is more necessary to our interest than beauty than we imagine.

Questions have been asked in parliament as to the propriety of allowing members of the British delegation to travel in this way as some consider able cost to the taxpayer. This question, however, is not whether this or that member should be allowed to make use of these facilities, but whether the experiment should have been made.

How Peace Envoy's Traveled. The procedure for members of the Peace Conference wishing to fly to London was simple enough. A return was made to the air section every evening by a check of the number of machines available for the following day, and intending passengers were notified according to whether they would be able to fly.

At 8:30 on the following morning the register reports were brought to the Hotel de Ville, in the conditions were favorable the passenger or passengers were sent out to the aerodrome at 9:30, near Versailles, usually with the air mail, by the regular bus service for leaving the passenger and simple time to catch the train for Boulogne.

The time required for the journey by air was with the exception of one or two hours less than two hours to Paris. A. Handley Page, on the other hand, may take from three to five hours, according to the wind.

The experiment has shown that traveling by air can be efficiently organized as an alternative to other means of transport and that it can be popularized. The fact that there is any transportation that is so quick and so comfortable is a great advantage.

It is surprising from one thing of it to be carried through the atmosphere at 100 miles an hour by a small plane of wood and canvas, that one does not think of it as a means of the weather.

Probably it may be some time before people especially nervous with flight will be able to get away or feel a new paper on a passenger day, but perfect organization shows that the man who starting his feet, journeying without a care, has the necessary power cover him while he travels also during the hours of his journey over the same ground that he would have to cover if he were to travel by land.

Of the conduct of traveling by air.
