Double-crossed and Tricks Were Many Many in the Good Old Days- Ask Tommy Ryan

Talk of sharp practice recalls the memorable scrap between Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan at Maspeth, L.I., in 1896. McCoy, a novice in experience, was Ryan's sparring partner when they saw a chance to get a bunch of the long green. They had a quarrel and McCoy issued a challenge. Ryan accepted it and the late James C. Kennedy made the match. McCoy privately informed Ryan that he was in poor health and would do no hard work for the fight. As a result Ryan, taking the wily Kid at his word, did not train at all. McCoy, however, went to a quiet resort and put himself in splendid condition.
