God's Hour.
'Tis not the hour that I would choose God sends the ray of light! Although each time it seems to me That I have chosen right, But when from it, long past, whereon I have too sadly gazed, I reach the light of God's wise hour, Its brightness holds me dazed.
—Vlyn Johnson.

Little Bobby—Don't you want to take me to the toboggan slide with you some day, Mr. Jinks?
Mr. Jinks—I never go to any toboggan slide, Bobby; never saw a toboggan.
Bobby (a trifle displeased)—That's funny. I heard pa say something about your going down hill at a furious rate.
Direction of Government pulp and paper mill to output 30,000,000 pounds of print paper a year for government use has been approved by joint congressional committee on printing.

Art of Saving.

It is easy enough to make money—said a business man the other day. The hard thing to learn is how to save and how to spend it. The first year I was married I was earning three thousand, last year I pulled down four, and this year I am getting away with five. As I've said, it's easy enough to make money—any man with average intelligence can do it—but how in the world are you going to save it? I don't seem to be getting any ahead.

The situation is one that many a family faces. All may not be in circumstances as comfortable as those of the man mentioned above, but the situation is practically the same.

Family thrift is almost an unknown quantity in the average American household. Our men are famous for their generosity and most of their wives run the household on the same generous plan. As the income grows the demands on it grow bigger, but so gradually does this change take place that it is almost imperceptible.

It is quite true that a man might not be able to put his hand on a single tangible thing which he was enjoying with a salary of $5,000 a year that he did not have when his earning capacity was little more than half this amount. Extraneous creeps upon us so gradually that the inroads it makes upon our income are hardly noticed at the time. It is only when we sit down and take account of our mode of existence that we realize we are spending more and getting less for the money.

Every sane man and woman wants to save. They know it is their only insurance against the future. No one can afford to live on the present moment, every family stands the chance of facing a rainy day, and if they are wise they will be prepared for that dreary occasion.

Perhaps you think it is impossible to save on the salary you are earning at present. In many instances, unfortunately, this is true. But what ever your income, sit down and make out a family budget that shall provide for a certain percentage of savings regularly.

New Appointment as Chief Engineer of D. A. R.

Nova Scotia Buying Farms.
'We are buying up a lot of farms through the Annapolis valley. We will divide them into 20 acre lots and the returned soldier who desires to take up farming will be offered such a lot to work upon,' said George B. Corbett, of Annapolis Royal, N. S., who was in St. John yesterday. 'We are asking the provincial and federal governments to assist us in the work and if they refuse then we will buy the farms ourselves and hand them over to the returned men,' he added. He said the first step in the movement was the amalgamation of all the western Boards of Trade. One of the prime factors governing the amalgamation was to provide some scheme whereby the returned soldier could be speedily and profitably, both to the man himself and the community, assimilated on his return from the firing line.—St. John Globe.

Learn to Forget.
To forget—that is what we need just to forget. All the petty annoyances, all the vexing irritations, all the mean words, all the unkind acts, the deep wrongs, the bitter disappointments—let them go, don't hang on to them. Learn to forget. Make a study of it. Practice it. Do

Anaemia

"Only tired."
This is the way anemic, bloodless people usually describe their condition.
But there is a pallor of the lips, eyelids and gums which denotes the weak, watery state of the blood.
Tired feelings tell of muscular weakness. Failure of the digestive organs indicates their weakened action. The system is running down because the blood is lacking in the nutritive element which is necessary to rebuild the cells wasted by the daily work and in the process of living.
In this weakened condition one is an easy prey to colds and all contagious diseases. The blood must be enriched by such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food before you can hope to regain strength.
Anaemia does not correct itself, and, consequently, the greatest danger lies in neglecting to take active treatment until the strength is too far wasted.
Many thousands have been cured of anaemia by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and this is the best proof that it will not fail you.
It supplies, in condensed and easily assimilated form, the ingredients from which nature forms rich, red blood. Consequently, the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

DRAW CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Heredity in Egg Laying.

'Like father like son,' does not hold anywhere near good in creating egg layers; that, like mother the son is the father of his daughter.
The power of transmission in egg laying is from the mother through the father to his daughters, each generation of grandmothers possessing the egg-laying capacity of its grand-dam to the extent that nature allows shall be usual 50 to 75 per cent, provided the male of the grand-dam propagates the eggs. For any laying hen can only be pre-vent (possessed) of the double dose of productivity coming from the sire and dam to the same extent that the females are productive, possessing the laying capacity of their dam and granddam, hereditarily carried down by their sire from his dam.)

With these facts proven beyond question, in mind, the next nearest approach to proven determinations in producing layers, is anatomical counterpart of the female which should be apparent in the male, that he in turn may transmit to his female offspring a natural proportion of his male productivity.

A simple study of a hen's anatomy that is the nature of a hen's anatomy, as against the similar study of the anatomy of a man layer (a poor producer as shown in the picture) teaches us (and this is immediately science of the highest order) that in the covert, that the pelvic bones of the layer are this and straight. The distance between the end of the pelvic bone and the end of the breast bone is such that the junction will fit the pelvic bone of a layer, and the pelvic bone of a male.

Simply mating the heavy laying hen to any male without regard to his ancestry, particularly the female side of it, will not produce heavy layers in the resultant progeny, except to a small degree or in inverse proportion as demanded and insisted by the laws of heredity.
In an examination of 3,000 birds entered in an American egg-laying competition the proportions of layers and non-layers have been proven beyond dispute; also see anatomical studies in connection with these same 3,000 birds have proven beyond question that the heavy layers are as easily picked out at the beginning of the competition year as their records prove them later on.
What little time is devoted to this study is well worth while; to pick the layers from a flock of any proportion is a simple matter and the consequent reduction in feeding expense will amount to more money in a year than the cost of a few hours of a student's study to its accomplishment.

Proof of insanity.
A young lawyer, not noted for intelligence, succeeded in getting a client acquitted of murder. Meeting a friend a few days afterwards the lawyer was greeted with warm congratulations.
'Yes,' he said, mopping his brow, 'I got him off but it was a narrow escape.'
'A narrow escape? How?'
'Oh, the toughest cases go over now. You know I examined the witnesses and made the arguments myself, the plea being self-defense. The jury was out two whole days. Finally the judge asked what the trouble was.
'Only one thing, your honor,' replied the foreman. 'Was the prisoner's counsel retained by him or appointed by the court?'
'No, gentlemen,' the prisoner is a man of means,' said the judge, 'and engaged his own counsel.'
'I could not see what bearing the question had on the evidence,' continued the lawyer, 'but to minutes later he filed the jury, and what do you think he verdict was?'
'What?' asked his friend.
'Why not guilty, on the ground of insanity.'

An old lady who had been introduced to a doctor, who was also a professor in a university, felt some what puzzled as to how she would address the great man.
'What I call you, "doctor" or "professor"?' she asked.
'Oh, just as you wish,' was the reply; 'no matter of fact some people call me an old idiot.'
'Indeed,' she said sweetly, 'but they they are people that know you.'
