As a public man, Sir John was opposed by Sir Leonard Tilley, and he also was a leader in opposition to confederation. John has tried many important cases, chief of which was the case of John A. M. Vail near St. John. The murder was not discovered until a year after its commission, and the unfortunate girl was supposed to be in the United States. The most entirely circumstantial, but very ducted by the late judge Wetmore, and the trial attracted intense interest throughout Canada. Another trial over which Sir John presided, and which became a cause celebre, was that of the Caraquet ment of the school law in 1875 and incident thereto, the trial of Chasson, indicted for the murder of Gifford. The murder trial lasted a month, and ended in conviction, but judgment was arrested by the
