 annot help thinking，the figure of the worth Prior Juan Perez de．Marchena on the wid was se who finally procured for the great hella，and it was from the assistance of Isa the convent，after a considerable period hospitable detention，daring which the friar worked arduously on his behalf，that Columbus， clothes more fit for the sphere of a court before Grenad． the first is unquestionably the most interesting， and most stirring in its appeals to the fancy，and oorse the most important in its results． It is difficult to compass the true greatness of the man by such sympathies as the amazing growth of civilisation and science has left to portions，horrible counterfeits of the asp． water or lay dark and secret within the creek of the magic country，waiting for Christian mariners to come along that they might feas off their carcases，and make merry with thei souls．There was no limit to marine haman credulity，and the first voyage of Columbus abounds in illustrations of it．The most re markable，indeed，of his minor achievement was ihe control he acquired over his people when they had floated out of sight of land，an were beginning to vary their Salve Reginas， murmurings against the impracticability of the scheme，and with yearning glances into tac North and East，where stood their old home the only actual thing their minds could find to ## bewilderment and to sharpen doubts of earthly influences into convictions． of the sailor of Columbus are to be supple mented by the inadequacy of the nautica appliances of that day．The height of the sunwas to be measured by the astrolabe；but here were the tbree little ships steering weatwar into sheer visionary distance，with nothing beyond，if the conclusions of the brughty， vigilant，sleepless Genoese should prove with at foundation．And what should a degree but a line and a sandglass to measure it with Nervous and full of ladicrous miggivings as re the crew，yet a correct estimate ol the mind empty of admiration for them．Sucb courage as they exhibited is overshadowed， confidence，by the heaven－inspired faith in bis own convietions，of their mighty eaptain．His men were withont his enthasiasm to support them，they had embarked on what was un－ questionably to them a very eccentric voyage and，though their hearts often failed them，yet in the end they discovered spirit enough to furnish a glorious folfilment to the hopes and expeetations of Columbus．The great naviga－ tor＇s first expedition was made in three ships． though the subject has been frequently dis cussed，it has never been satisfactorily settled． The vessel on which Columbus hoisted his flag －namely，the Sants Maria－is represented as that the was open in the centre，being deceked onis at aeche end，with a stern crommed by one ot the lofty castes of those daje．There is every remen every resen to suppose，bosever，that the vesels were really small，even ses stipas then went，for so early as the year 1419 craft are to be heard of as carrying cargoes which suggest a burden of not less than six hundred tons， a burden of not less than six handred tons， whilst in Columbus＇s time the carrying power whilst in Colambus＇s time the carrying power of many craft ranged from one handred and fitty to twelve bundred and fifty tons．It is not only improbable that Columbus＇s oppor－ not only improbable that Columbun＇s oppor－ tunities would have yielded him choice of large judgment would have dictated the selection small．vessels，for the greater convenience o exploring the creeks，bays，and rivers of the coasts which he never for an instant doubted he should discover．Admiration and reverence， indeed，are increased by thoughts of the small and humble means by which this mighty admira and his doubting，superstitious companies of men opened out the discovery of the great Western world of America．The foorth cen tenary of Columbus should prove a festival fo tenary of Columbus should prove a festival fo more than one nation．His is a name and memory，indeed，for all humanity to honour． Dana，in his vacation voyage to Cubs and back，in writing of the resting－place of Chris：o pher Columbus in the cathedral at Havannah， pher Columbus in the cathedral at Havanna， says：＂The crestor of a hemisphere！It not often we feel not often we feel that monuments on an island of that group which be gave to civilised man，you stand before this simple monumental slab，and $\begin{aligned} & \text { know that all of him }\end{aligned}$ Which man could gather up lies behind it，so overpowering is the sense of the greatness of

I know two or three girls who live in a large Wide－awake town where there is a fine school and the teachers，of course，and all the study ing that goes on，gives an intellectual tone to and reading－clubs，of coarse there are clubs besides this，sewing societies connected wit the charches，and benevolent associations to of their time．But I was startled to find they also had not only a theatrical club and a boa clab and a French club and a walking club， have alwost no personal existence．And seem a few days of listening I heard one dear gir deplore her lack of time for practicing，though left to herself would naturally put it first of all her parsuits．Another dear girl seemed to b way，protesting piteously that she hated to be doing nothing but scratching she hasty sket now and then at one of the club picnics There was no idleness，for the clabs involved varions committees，and these girls were being appealed to and interrapted constantly in the routine or emergencies of so much genera usiness．The quiet home life was reduced o a fragment of time；I wonder it this is not
