The Easy Promiser.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Last summer, in the course of a walking trip, we stopped at a lighthouse which was a favorite point of interest to tourists. The keeper had two children and we snapped them with our camera. Then we asked the keeper for his name and postoffice address so that we could send him copies.

He gave it in a lack-lustre, uninterested way which surprised me. "I suppose your children have their pictures taken so often that it isn't much of a novelty," I probed, tentatively.

"Yes," he said; "a good many of the folks take their pictures."

"You must have quite a collection?"

"That's the last we hear of it."

"Well, no," he said. "You see, the folks always take our address and promise to send the pictures; but most always that's the last we hear of it." And then I didn't wonder any more that his voice was lack-lustre.

It is so dangerously easy to make generous promises!

And equally easy, evidently, to forget them!

City people go into the country and, struck with the comparative meagerness of opportunity in certain lines, they give off promises to share their right hand left. When they get back to the city they will certainly send magazines and books and post cards and snapshots, and goodness knows what. Then they go back and the country folks watch for the postman to fulfill some of these promises, and watch in vain—unless perchance, like my friend of the lighthouse, they have too much

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

Fulton's Victory.

Fred Fulton's victory over Tom Cowler in the first round at New York, has given him a boost as the most formidable contender for Jess Willard's coveted championship laurels.

The contest, while it lasted, was replete with action, and the big boxers did not spend an idle moment. Fulton's left hand jab drew blood from a cut over Cowler's right eye before the contest had progressed one minute, but the English boxer was not bothered by this and kept swinging at his adversary. One or two of Cowler's blows landed cleanly and shook the Minnesota giant up a little, but a sharp left hook to the point of the jaw, delivered as Cowler came at him, sent the Englishman down cleanly for a count of nine.

This blow took the large crowd completely by surprise, and there was a hushed silence as the referee counted over the prostrate Englishman. Cowler at the count of five tried to regain his feet, but keeled over flounderingly on his face.

He managed to get erect before 9 seconds had been tolled off, however, and staggered groggily to the ropes. There Fulton rained a series of right and left hand blows on Cowler's jaw and the big English boxer collapsed, to be counted out in a sitting position, with his right arm hanging limply over the centre rope of the three surrounding the ring.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Please tell me on which finger the engagement ring should be worn and should it be worn on the same finger after marriage?" was Nina's query.

"The engagement ring is worn on the third finger of the left hand and is worn, with the wedding ring, on the same finger after marriage," said her aunt.

You're Bilious! Let "Cascarets" Liven Liver and Bowels

Don't stay headachy, constipated, sick, with bad breath and stomach sour.

Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

UNRELIABLE.

"On James P. Jinks you can't depend—he doesn't keep his word." This is the punkest recommendation that any man has heard. The delegate with that reputation can't find much work to do; wherever he appears in town, employers cry out

WALT MASON

"Shoo." I hired a youth whose name is Charles, to help me bale some hay; to bind the deal I paid him arles, he said he'd come next day. But never did that youth appear, which made my lifeblood boil; he went a-fishing in the mere, and passed up honest toil. He comes to me when days are flown, and bids me for a job, but evermore I turn him down, the piker and the swab. He comes to me when tempest blows, and asks me for a pie, but I've no charity for those on whom one can't rely. I hire a youth named Benjie Bird to ply the saw and spertie, for lads who do not keep their word are of but little worth. The down-and-outs are mostly men who this false system played; who broke and broke, and broke again the promises they made.

Your Boys and Girls.

Nothing is more important to a child's physical well being than proper digestion and assimilation of food, and in order that this may take place, good teeth are essential.

Digestion begins in the mouth with the mastication of the food and in order to masticate the food sufficiently to derive benefit good teeth are necessary. Hence the care of the teeth should be one of the first considerations the mother should give the child.

As the teeth grow they should be watched closely and brushed each night and morning. Should the first teeth show signs of decay the child should be taken to a dentist for advice. Brown bread should be given children as they require it for the formation of bones and teeth, as it contains phosphates of wheat.

THE HONEYMOON.

The honeymoon is a bright spot in married life surrounded by hotel bills.

When a young man and woman decide to get married and attack the high cost of living with both fists the station and begin to plan on a quiet little trip which will not cost any more than a new bungalow with sleeping porch attachment. This trip is called the honeymoon, and is always looked forward to with great pleasure by the groom's father, who is not able to have a new suit of clothes for two years after it happens.

The honeymoon is given an auspicious start by solicitous male friends of the groom, who gather at the station and beset the trunks of the bridal party with soothing emblems and epigrams. If a tourist sleeper has been engaged, these friends climb into it and throw rice and old shoes into the faces of mortified passengers who have been married once and would prefer not to be reminded of it. The first three days of the honeymoon are usually devoted to picking hulled rice out of the ear lobes of the contracting parties and trying to act like total strangers.

One of the first things which a youthful and inexperienced bridegroom discovers on the honeymoon is that every hotel clerk knows just why he has left home and immediately doubles the rates for room with bath. This cruel practice, if persisted in, is bound to reduce the crop of nervous, fang-toothed bridegrooms and blushing, rice-strewn brides until race suicide will be as common in this country as reports of Villa's capture.

The only man who can carry out a honeymoon successfully is the one who has been married four times and knows every hotel clerk by his first name.

MASSAGING THE FACE.

When you give your face the regular ten-minute massage you must have a good cold cream, and if you have not already found one just to your liking think you will discover the following formula to be a delightful addition to your beauty necessities: sweet almond oil, two ounces; spermaceti, one ounce; cocoanut oil, two ounces; white wax, one ounce; benzoin (tincture), three drops; lanolin, two ounces; orange flower water, two ounces.

After putting together all the ingredients except the benzoin and the orange flower water let them mingle by setting over a low flame. When they are melted take off fire, beat with an egg beater and then, when nearly cold add the benzoin, drop by drop, stirring constantly. The orange flower water is poured in a thin stream while beating the mixture.

In addition to this you should possess a good wrinkle astringent. The glycerine astringent is a determined foe of all wrinkles and you should have it for daily use without delay. Here is the formula for it: Glycerine, 100 grams; alcohol, 100 grams; tincture of benzoin, 100 grams; rose water, 250 gram; boric acid, 50 grams. Let the boric acid dissolve in the alcohol, then add the glycerine, next the rose water, and finally the benzoin.

Woman Spy's Drying Wash German

Furloughed Pollu Tells
Used Arrangement of en to Reveal Military
Story of the Blacksmith Wine—An Officer in the my Who Was a Spy.

Paris, Dec. 29.—A day in the Paris papers contained a paragraph telling of a young milliner, in the neighborhood of the noble, who had been caught by the spy for the Germans and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment.

"We don't shoot women more," said a soldier friend on permission from the Germans to whom I spoke of the story. "They have been no women shot in time. They generally get away at hard labor."

"Are you as much troubled by spies?" I asked.

He laughed. "As long as war there will be spies," he said. "You can't stamp them out. The thing that you can do is catch them. It was only a few days ago that we caught a woman spy."

"You remember when we were in the Somme? Long enough ago, well, there was not much to be done when we got it. Our village when we got it. Our had knocked it pretty well, but we found an old woman. She had remained all through German occupation, and had managed to hide and stay behind all the rest of the civil population evacuated. She was in a celling our bombardment, and went into the town she came to welcome us, the only one of the final French inhabitants remaining. As it was French she insisted on remaining. She saw no reason why she should go when the French back into occupation."

The old washerwoman. "She stayed and did our washing. She was busy all the every morning she would take clothes out and spread them ground to dry. You could see the shirts and underwear in the cellar where she lived, hanging on all the posts and walls."

"The old woman pattered and worked most industriously. She always came out when there were troops going through the village, and she would talk to men, find out where they were, where they came from and where they expected to be there. And ever she came out from her cell to go to her wash, lying dry, examine it, turn it over, arrange it. She was a washerwoman. It was a man, her, having everything just like the French soldiers, who had back her home for her in France."

Germans Knew Concentration

"But the Germans seemed to every concentration of troops in that region. Their shells us every time. We could move that they did not know about. We set three men to duty of finding out how the Germans got their information. First thing they found out was there were more air flights of choppers than at any other time. There seemed to be a Boche aeroplane hovering in ruins. They decided that they were something about Bouché, which made it a particularly observation point. As the old man was the only thing that quished the place from any ruined village, they arrested him."

"At first she denied everything, the German accuracy in bomb concentrations ceased to arrest. It does not take a moment to convince a drumhead martial, and the old woman the game was up. She then to be French, and said that she consented to spy for the Germans partly under threats, partly her life had been spared by her well, and she had no other way of getting money to live. Finally acknowledged that she was a spy and had been purposely left in the spy when the Germans got out."

"She got twelve years in prison."

The Three Plough Horses

"Spies work all kinds of ways," my friend continued. "There was an old fellow, who came back to his job behind the lines and did his fall ploughing with three horses, a red, a white and a black. He was signalling by changing position of the white horse. He was easy to catch, as a specially a plough team, always in the same order. Some of the who were farmers noticed him constantly changing his horses. They talked about it and
