

The ADVERTISER'S PICTORIAL PAGE

Miss Edna Best blowing up balloons for the balloon race at the annual theatrical garden party held in the grounds of Chelsea Hospital.

This smart chapeau displays the latest in brims for milady's millinery. The crown of the hat is made of milan hemp.

Miss Gladys Westby, an artist's model, came to this continent from England to meet her fiancé. They quarreled. Now she is returning home.

Seagrove, an Englishman, who won the Grand Prix automobile race in France, relieves a parched throat after driving at the rate of 121 kilometers an hour.

The body of Lieut. L. J. Roth, the ill-fated United States balloon pilot, being taken from the plane on the return to Cleveland.

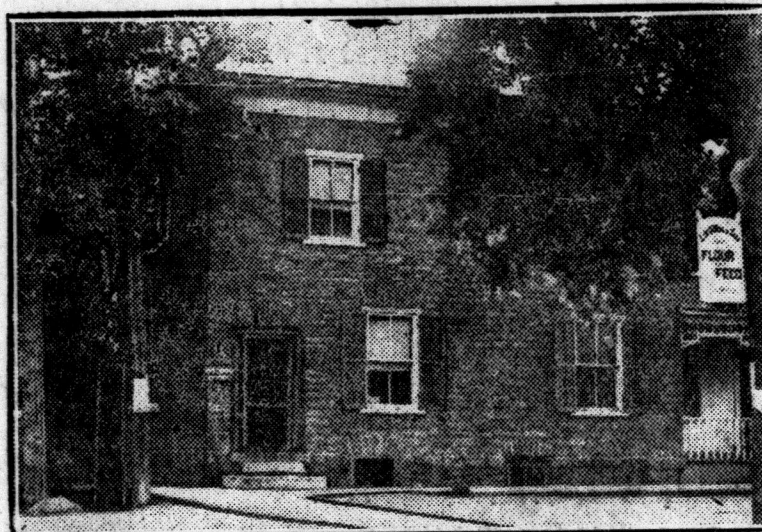

Photo shows the birth place of Premier-elect Howard Ferguson at Kemptville.

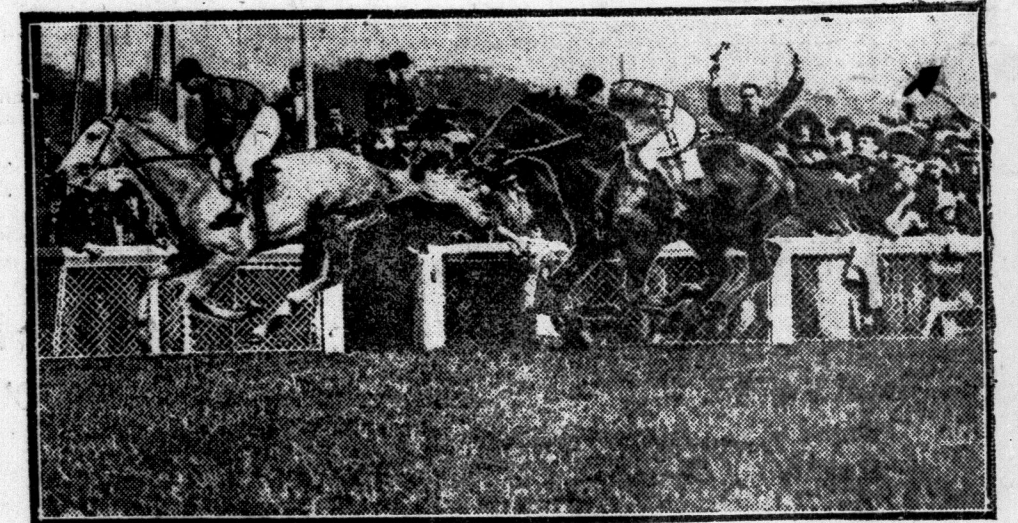

These two bathers perform a double dive by the smaller one standing on the shoulders of the larger.

This air-propelling craft, photographed on its trial spin, is the outcome of this man's dream, after forty-nine years.

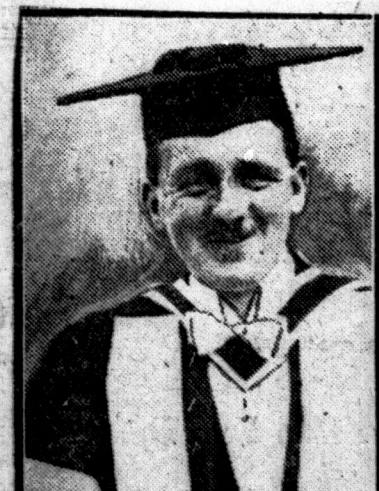

"Reg'lar fellers" on the beach at Sunnyside take time from play to have a photograph taken.

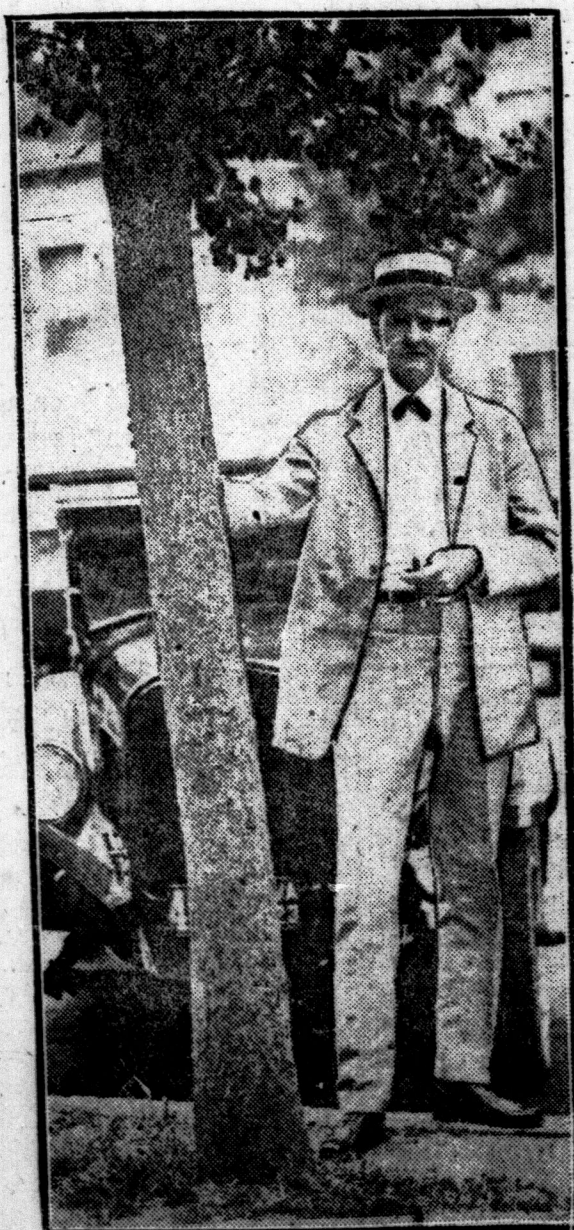

Filibert de Savoie, a seventeen-to-one shot, won the Grand Prix at Longchamps. Photo shows the winner with all fours off the ground.

Gen. Pengalos, who commands the Greek army, is quoted as saying: "I have only to press a button and the whole Greek line will move against the Turks."

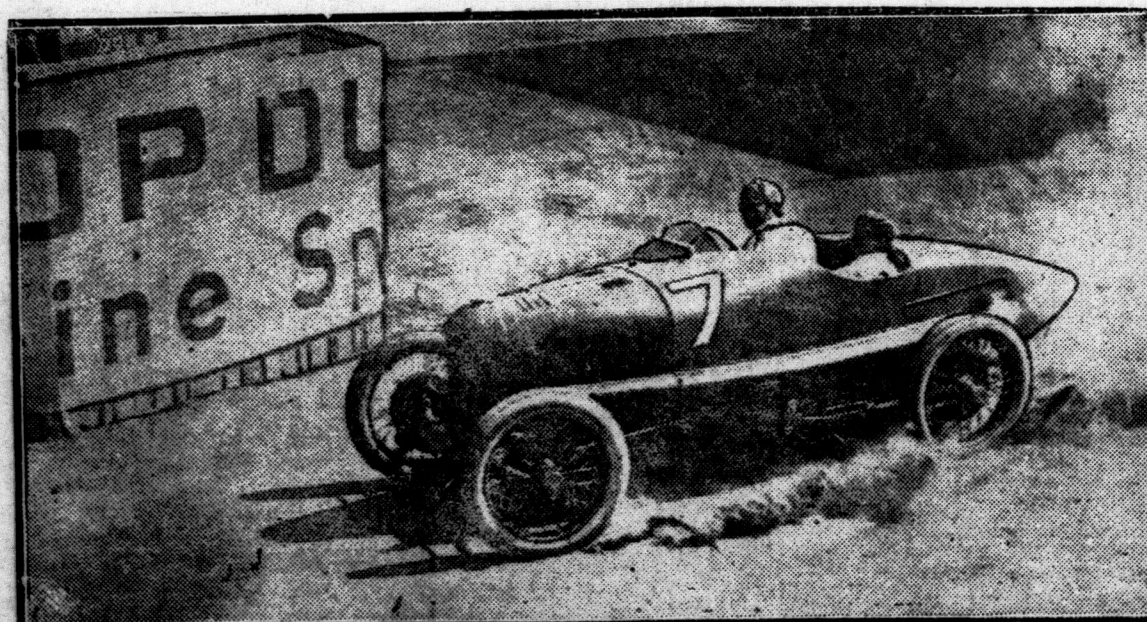

T. E. Johnston, B.A., LL.B., B.L., received the degrees M.A. and LL.D. recently at Trinity College, Dublin. He is the youngest known recipient of the LL.D. degree.

Clifford Lanham, superintendent of the tree department of the district of Columbia, has planted 105,000 shade trees in Washington in the last thirty years.

Canada is mapping the northern country and protecting her forests with airplanes. Photograph shows one of the machines at the main station on Orient Bay.

Divo, driving second in the race for the Grand Prix of automobiles, near Tours, France, makes the first turn in good shape.

Mlle. Marie Ford of Paris, known as the best dressed woman in the French capital, has recently returned to Europe.

J. B. Beck, United States solicitor-general, was recently called to the British bar in order to act as counsel for the American government in a case arising out of war contracts with a Canadian firm.

H. H. Raeger, national legislative chairman of the disabled American veterans of the world war, is seeking to have all former service men combine on one legislative program for the coming congress.