LITERARY NOTES. 1

A notable feature in the December' number of the Atlantic Monthly is the supplement of twenty-six pages containing the masterly oration by James Russell Lowell and the poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes delivered at Cambridge on the 250th anniversary of the foundation of Harvard University. Both of these have attracted much attention and not without good cause. They constitute a literary event worthy of the occasion that called them forth. In this number Miss Murfree concludes her story of Tennessee Life, "In the Clouds." In this her genius has reached high water mark. She has done nothing so good be-A strong announcement is made for the coming year, including a Serial by Mrs. Oliphant and T. B. Aldrich; one by F. Marion Crawford; and contributions by. Dr. Holmes, Lowell, Whittier, Warner, Stedman, Miss Jewett, Miss Murfree, Celia Thaxter, John Burroughs, and a whole galaxy of brilliant writers. Relying entirely upon its literary merit, without illustrations, no Magazine that we know reaches so high and sustained a degree of excellence. publishers are Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Price $4 a year. To subscribers to the METH-ODIST MAGAZINE it will be furnished for $3.25.

The Chicago house of Charles H. Kerr & Co. issue a volume of eight sermons on Burden-Bearing and Burden-Sharing, four of them by Jenkin Lloyd Jones and four by William C. Gannett. The initial sermon of the book, "Blessed be Drudgery," by Mr. Gannett, has reached a circulation of 16,000 in pamphlet form.

The November and December numbers of Lippincott's Magazine make a new departure in giving a complete story of about 70 pages in addition to the regular full amount of reading. John Habberton and Mrs. Burnett have thus contributed; and stories by Fawcett, Julian Hawthorn and other leading writers are announced. In this busy age this will be more attractive than the long-winded serials running for a year and a half. The price of this Magazine is only $3 a year.

For lovers of pure and noble art we know no periodical, at a moderate price, so instructive and so interesting as the Magazine of Art, (Cassell & Co., New York, 35 cents per number, $3.50 a year). It is a splendidly printed and illustrated quarto, containing about 500 high-class engravings in the year, and each number is to have some special photogravure, etching, or tint print. The engravings are of the high-class type for which this house is famous throughout the world.

The elegant Christmas card presented by the pastor of the Central Methodist Church of this city is one of the handsomest we have seen. It gives a view in gold and colours of the interior and exterior of the Church, with graceful lettering and an appropriate motto for the year. This pleasant custom Brother Benson has observed for several years.
