It is an old axiom that he is farthest from the market who has nothing to sell.
Less grumbling about poor markets and more attention paid to growing something to sell in them would help some farniers out immensely.

If you intend to use the fungicides and infecticides preparations must be made early. There will be no time to get ready after the season opens. Blossoms must be sprayed as soon as they appear, must be sprayed as soon as they appear, and a day or two in delay may cause the loss of a portion of the fruit,

The rot on grapes can only be prevented by vigilant work. The debris around the vines must be raked up and burned, and the full use of air slaked lime made on the ground, while the sprayer must be put in use not only early but often during the whole season.

If farmers were as careful to get rid of poor stock as to get rid of the weeds there would be a great advantage gained. A serub animal is on a par with a weed. It takes nourishment from better stock, and eccupies room that could be used more prefitably with something else.

The effect of feeding linseed and cottonseed meal are plainly shown in the quality of the manure. Both substances are rich in nitrogen and mineral matter, and form a valuable addition to the raand form a valuable addition to the ration where nitrogenous elements are lacking. In proportion to feeding value, as well as the value imparted to the manure, it is doubtful if any foods are

This may be avoided somewhat by the use of plenty of healding, but the safer plan is to have the space analogous principality for the space and the space analogous principality for the space analogous principality for the space analogous principality for the space analogous pr in order to prevent draught.

Farmers who use artificial fertilizers are convinced that it is an advantage to expend money in that direction no matter he we much manure they may have. The tertificets are a complete addition to the fertility of the farm, while the manure comes from the products of the form itself. Unless something is brought on the farm to balance that which is removed the farm will at some time begin
