

region is marked by rapid development in the industrial sector, agriculture and tourism. All of this unavoidably causes conflict with the surrounding environment. The Leningrad planners focused on solving these ecological problems. They have set up a model for the utilization of forest and natural resources and of water reservoirs in the peninsula.

Lesnaya promyshlennost'

21 January 1988

Page 1 (Full text)

[Faint, mirrored text from the reverse side of the page, including words like "composition", "patented", "well received", "nature and this has prevented industrial exploitation", "up to now", "before the first plantation could be established", "The plantation will eliminate the presence of black pepper", "Soviet-made", "sweet", "the no equivalent", "this is", "lot for two years and that will be transplanted", "stole", "to"]

Leningrad Planners' Work on Kamchatka Scheme
5891 v. 22
Planners at the Leningrad Institute of Town Planning have completed work on a territorial environmental protection plan for Kamchatka. This

