

negotiation at the United Nations, we are working in good faith to provide a better world in which men and nations can walk together in friendliness and self-respect. But I say to you today that nothing serves more to strengthen the fabric of our national life and to give heart to our own people and faith to those in other lands than humanitarian efforts to further the cause of human health and well-being, not for ourselves alone but for all mankind.

---

S/A