REGULATIONS GOVERNING PROGRAMMING ON CBC

Question No. 1,998—Mr. Jones:

1. What are the regulations which govern programming aired on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation networks across Canada which have been locally produced? Who determines these regulations?
2. Do these regulations differ with each region or province in Canada?
3. Do the opinions voiced by the viewing public have an influence on the airing of programs over the CBC network?
4. Once a program meets the regulations, can it be aired anywhere in Canada without re-examination for suitability?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. The CBC has developed a set of policies which apply to all facets of programming, national and local. Some of these policies arise from the statutory requirements of the Broadcasting Act, some from the regulations of the CRTC, some from provisions of the Criminal Code, and others have been formulated by CBC management.

2. The policies apply at all CBC locations.

3. In both radio and television, the audience is welcome to make its views known to the CBC, and these are taken into consideration by producers and program planners in developing and improving programs. In addition, information is sought on the opinions of television audiences through audience surveys and the CBC's own audience panel, which studies the enjoyment of programs.

4. Since the regulations and policies governing programs are the same across Canada, regionally-produced programs may also be broadcast nationally or in other regional centres.
