Objection has been threatened by a section of the British opposition to any alliance which embraced India on the ground that it would be a practical admission that Britian was unable alone to defend her eastern em-arms. The criticism is of a fanciful nature, and is in direct opposition to the other argument coming from the same quarter, that the victory of Japan must exercise an unsettling effect upon these same native subjects. What is much more likely is that native opinion both in the independent and protected nations of Asia will recognize that Britain and Japan stand together for peace and are strong enough to ensure it. That the terms of the alliance will be acceptable to the United States and London, Sept. 27.-The text of the new agicement between Great Britain and Japan, which was signed by Lord and Japan, which was signed by Lord Larsdowne, the British foreign secretary and Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister to Great Britain, on Aug. 12, was issued by the foreign office last evening. The momentous document is a brief one, comprising less than 800 words, including eight articles and a preamble.

words, including eight articles and a preamble.

Accompanying the agreement is a letter from Lord Lansdowne to the British ambasadors at St. Petersburg and Paris, for transmission to the Russian and French governments, respectively, in which the foreign secretary courteously reviews the agreement and earcfully points out that the new defensive alliance is not intended as a merace, but rather as a guarantee of peace and prosperity in the far east, in which all countries may participate. The alliance practically makes Great Britain Japan and Japan Great Britain for purposes of defence "in the regions of east Asia and India," This inclusion of India specifically as a point at which any aggression by a foreign power will call for the assistance of Japan finds much favor with the press of London, the morning papers, in long laudatory articles, welcoming the new and more extensive alliance of the two insular kingdoms, west an deast, as giving immediate realef from the dengerous thundercloud which for so many years was hung over the Indian frontier.

Russia Not a Menace. Russia Not a Menace.

Sir Charles Dilke took the position that the new treaty makes no change in the pre-existing status quo, but said it was an inevitable consequence of the new conditions in the far east, and that it was certainly a stronger guarantee of the maintenance of peace than the previous alliance. He argued that antee of the maintained and an argued that the previous alliance. He argued that Russia was really never a menace to the Indian frontier, but merely played on the susceptibilities of Great Britain. With regard to Persia, Sir Chas. did not believe that Russia would ever risk a quarrel with India.

"In reality." said he, "the countries most affected are France and Germany, because to both the new treaty scures possessions which they have found it impossible to defend. To France the arrangement is entirely satisfactory. With Germany the case may be different, because it deals a blow at the asperations which Germany is supposed to entertain with regard to
