The theatres are not providing all the humor these days, nor a wonopoly of good acting. Just outside the Palmer House last night a seedy-looking individual, with the rim of his christy breken and his toesticking out of his boots, came up to three well-dressed society men, and, in a maudin voice, asked for the loan of 10c, "just for a bed."

As he was driving home his plea, another equally shabby man, carrying a "I'moind" card, staggered for the loan of 10c, "just for a bed."

Registered Protection.

A Trademark is a protection to the public.

No sane business firm would spend thousands in advertising one if the goods bearing it were not what they are claimed to be.

Of Trademarks, The Scientific American recently spoke in this wise:

"The trade mark is essential; it is a protection to the honest makes and a mense to the dishonest maker; it is a Protection to the Buyer, and he realizes it, even to the extent of, in many instances, paying more for the article bearing it, perhaps after his merchant has assured him that 'Here is something as good or better for less.' Why is it? Because in this day and ago imitation and fraud has invaded every line of business, and the buyer must, to a greater or less extent, deal on faith; but he is not going wholly on faith if he can help it. A trade mark is a mark of identification that cannot be mistaken, even by the ignorant, and when once well and favorably known the high standing of the article bearing it is assured, because the Manufacturer must be careful to keep it up to the standard."

The "Slater Shoe" bears its makers' Registered Trade Mark on the Sole,

It is stamped with their price $3.00, $4.00 and

It is the only shoe sold in Canada and advertised by its makers.

It is the only shoe whose makers are responsible for its advertised qualities.

They say that it fits all kinds of feet, that it contains a fair proportion of leather, workmanship and profit.

They regulate the dealer's profit. It is Goodyear welted.
