where the men and officers were the guests of the manager. Dan Pierce.

Many young men walking the streets did not know what this war meant. No employer of labor, he stated, would be able to stand against public opinion and retain laggards in places that could be held by returned men. The men of his battalion were read, and giald to fight for the women, and men who were not physically fit, but they did not want to fight for the fit men who paraded up and down Yonge street, who had not the courage to fight for their mother or sister.

The colonel said he had great pleasure in presenting the medals that the fighting Irish tug-o-war team had won against all comers in the recent contest. He was not surprised, however, that the battalion team had won on account of their physical training.

To Fill Gaps.

Col. Lennox said the battalion was going to camp on July 8, and wished to have it up to strength before that time. They all hoped to shortly be in the firing line, and it was time for all men who possibly could, to get in the men who possibly could, to get in the ranks. During the last ten days men had to be rushed to the front to take the places of the men who had fallen. This will be a big day for the Irish at Scarboro Beach, Games of all Men Did Very Weil.

"The men did very weil indeed," said Lieut.-Col. John Campbell in front of the Torento armories yesterday afternoon when asked how the men did in the brigade manocurres at Codarvale yesterday. "You can see that they look as fresh as ever after the exercises and route march," said he, and in looking at the men as they marched past the armories, in the downfall of rain that had just commenced and lasted about half an hour, it was only by their dusty shoes that one could realize that they had not been out on a round-the-block parade. Col. Windeyer also expressed his pleasure at the way the manocurres and march had been conducted. The acting brigadiers had prepared comprehensive orders and had seen that they were carried out in a most military and satisfactory manner. Mr. Murdock is just back from New York, where he has taken part in the distribution of more than 350,000 ballots to railway workers. They are to vote on what action to take, because, at the largest conferences between capital and labor that ever took place in North America, the general managers, of whom there were 23, refused to make concessions. The shortage of labor which is being felt in Canada is acute on the railroads, according to Mr. Murdock. He cays that railway men are at a premium just now in many places. More than 800 of his own union, which is one of the four large unions, have gone to the front.

Supervised Administration.

Since 1913 Dr. James had been engaged as agricultural commissioner in supervising the administration of this act. In January, 1914, he was appointed by the Dominion Government a member of the board of inquiry into the high cost of living. For some years he had been a member of the board of regents of Victoria College, University of Toronto, and a member of the senate of the university. In 1912 the University of To-ronto conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

During 1902 and 1904 he was presi-tish gunners, as the case may be, fill these trenches with shell till the enemy can hardly live in them any longer. Then the positions are taken by a counter-attack.

Bukowina continues to be the theatre of continued Russian advance and they have already traversed almost the entire length of this crown land. Three villages west of Radautz have been occupied and the Town of Visnitz, on the Bukowina-Galician border, 35 miles southwest of Czernowitz, has also been seized. The Russian program appears first to be the clearing of the Russian left flank and the securing it by holding the passes of the Carpathians. When this is done it will permit of the making of an advance in southern Galicia, with the probable object of taking possession of the line of the Carpathians as the Russians proceed

The heavy blows inflicted on the Austrians have evidently greatly disturbed the German general staff, which is continuing to hurry forward einforcements from France and Italy to confront General Brusiloff. The fermans say that they made progress in the fighting on this front, but rogress in their sense refers more to gaining time than to anything else. If they take a position, they term this tactical success an advance.

On the rest of the eastern front, south of the Pripet, the Russians still appear to be devoting their energies to the repairing of the railway lines which the Austrians destroyed or partially destroyed in their retreat and to making preparations for another battle. They are also restoring the divisions engaged in the recent heavy fighting to their full strength. As to the next battle it is uncertain whether it will be forced on the enemy again, or whether the enemy will attack the Russians to regain his lost

The French presume that the active artillery firing of the enemy and his infantry attacks in the region of Verdun are now being really undertaken to mask the transfer of large forces from the west to the east. The next thing to look forward to in the west is some form of allied demonstration, or will that be started in the Balkans? Such a system of launching a big offensive is what is known as attacking the enemy in echelon, first, as has been done in Russia; next, say in France, or Italy, or the Balkans, and next in either of the two remaining of these three theatres of the war. To divine the exact plans of the allies would be fruitless, for their endeavors will be to use the element of surprise, such as has been used in Russia in attacking the Austrians on the 275-mile front between the Pripet marshes and the Roumanian frontier.

The action of the French in sending out aeroplane squadrons on nocturnal raids on stations and cantonments of the Germans north of Verdun indicates also that the enemy is shifting about troops. As he is calling men from France to go east, the inference is that troops are being transferred to the Russian theatre from the Verdun region. But it is also probable that the crown prince will keep up the launching of attacks before Verdun all summer, as he launched attacks in the Argonne a year ago. It will be remembered that he occasionally captured French first line trenches then as he has done now, but nothing further resulted from those operations, except that the French, watching their opportunity, retook these when

On the British front the Germans showed signs of activity by emitting gas on a very small part of the line southwest of Messines, but they did not send out their infantry to attack anything. German patrols were driven off east of Wytschaete and west of Pilkelm. The British exploded a mine opposite Haisnes and occupied the lip of the crater. The Germans exploded a mine east of Neuville St. Vaast, but it did no damage to the British positions and caused no casualties. Two British aeroplanes were brought down by the enemy and British artillery obtained direct hits on two Teuton anti-aircraft batteries, causing the ammunition of one to continue exploding for 20-minutes. It also silenced a German battery west of Lens.
