FINANCIAL and COMMERCIAL*FLUCTUATIONS OF BIG STOCKS

How Thursday's Record in a Dozen of Them Compared With Low Level in March.

(Boston Transcript, Aug. 8.)

The record of today's stock market score, in the following summary of fluctuations of a dozen of the most prominent Wall Street stocks. The years highest prices were made early in January, then came the drop to late March, slight rally and another fall in May, and May, more rally to late June, the average market of July and the upturn of August, coming today to more new low records for the year to date. The drop this morning began with the opening and by contrast with yesterday's closing, the first hour's lowest prices included losses of 2 1/2 in Amalgamated, 4 in Smelting, 1 1/2 in Sugar, 2 in Atchafalpa, 1 1/2 in St. Paul, 4 1/2 in Union Pacific, 2 1/2 in Southern Pacific, 3 in Reading, 3 1/2 in Northern Pacific, 3 in New York Central, 1 1/2 in Pennsylvania, and 1 1/2 in United States Steel. These twelve stocks thus had an average drop of 2 1/2 in the first thirty or forty minutes of trading. At these low prices, the twelve leading stocks compared thus:

	Low	High	Low	High
Amalgamated	100	104 1/2	100	104 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2
Atchafalpa	112 1/2	117 1/2	112 1/2	117 1/2

Thus, after 3 1/2 average drop from yesterday's closing there was a 2 1/2 rally—nearly complete by the middle of the hour. After that the market eased somewhat.

POINTS OF VIEW AND THE SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS

(Halifax Mail.)
The Lady and her afternoon caller were disposing of social problems over Limoges china.

It is so easy to deplore of the problems of the poor when sitting tea in a drawing-room over whose walls roses—the latest things in house ornamentation—chamber so delicately, yet with so vital a coloring of leaf and flower that the eyes thank God for the paper hanger.
Where "money talks."
The lady was asking me yesterday for a contribution to the Playground Fund, remarked the dainty dispenser of tea.
"Oh, she's talking it up in every direction! For my part I hate to see a girl take up funds of this sort—it's so—so advanced, and queer, and all that—makes a girl seem so peculiar. However, I gave her a dollar to get rid of her. For my own part I think it's all nonsense. The poor have too much done for them these days. That hateful 'Mail' is forever preaching 'the cause of the common people'—ridiculous, I call it."

Mrs. De Courtenay Smythe, who spoke was a very recent social importation. The lady in her "last name" was also a recent importation. Her housemaid recalled the exact time it was imported.
She had a shallow face, a short, fat white nose, and many rings upon it. Also she wore a beautiful gown. She was one of our latest things in vulgarisms.

The lady of the house proceeded:
"I was asking Jack about it last night and he positively refused to give anything—says he's willing enough to give to anything he sees any sense in, but supervised playgrounds for children are the limit."

The small daughter of the household was being prepared for bed.
The small daughter was a sort of very beguiling human flower—flowerlike in tint of hair, of eyes, of soft cheek. Flowerlike in her whole delicate body.

From her white neck she was accustomed at night to pour forth sentences of the maternal ear—not infrequently into the ear of an adoring dad.

The lady of the house—the hostess of the rooming drawing—was accustomed to go down before her handmaids without a protest—and the engaging small person knew it.

"I am going to open my bank tomorrow and give my money to the poor children for their play-dolls—like nurse said."

"Wasn't it sweet of her?" The lady of the house was confiding the baby's decision to make a run on her bank to the Lord of the Manor, returned from his tour, and, if the truth were to be told, tired out with them.

A sleeping child is ever an eloquent sight.
This proved the psychological moment for the sensible man. The next morning when the wealth of the little bank was deposited in the linen pinfold of the small person—an unsuspected unaccounted for $5 bill was revealed—the play-dolls had secured heavily this time.

A small girl, kissable and sweet, obviously in no need of the advantages of supervised playgrounds, was an early caller at St. Mary's grounds next day. She was accompanied by her nurse.
When, from a pink palm, colored like a sea shell she held out for the lady in charge, the sum of $5.25, and from the shade of a doorway "ambonnet" explained delightedly that this bewildering wealth was "out of her bank, and was for the poor children." The supervising lady could not resist the impulse to pick her up and kiss her.

Mrs. Donnelly, in the light of a very clean oil lamp, and in the trim tidiness of her bed-kitchen-drawing-room was discussing with Mr. Donnelly an exciting matter.

On Mr. Donnelly's big knee a six-year-old girl—with as bright an autumn head as a wisom—a face as over lighted as up street tenement reposed easily.

Mrs. Donnelly was a capable little woman—a little woman whose constitutional lightness of heart had its spring in some God-given fountain of good cheer and was proof against all vicissitudes of fortune.

She was what may be called an indomitably sweet tempered little woman, and to her the whole narrow, dusty, poverty stricken street did tribute as to a person "who had died with her."

But Mrs. Donnelly could not read.
"Her said it was in the Mail—a playground to the school—sings and all that, and a diligent spelling out—to state that there was a playground at the school house—a free playground—a playground with swings, with tiles, with sand pits."

In the street outside a drunken man was being taken into custody.
"Go it Jim—go it Jim this time."
Degraded women screamed it. Degraded men outside took it up. The air was full of coarse words—of vile suggestion.

AT THE NICKEL
It is really a remarkable fact that no film yet shown at the Nickel has had as salutary an effect upon onlookers as the picture "The Lost." On the Arizona Desert, in which father and mother are overcome and die of thirst, leaving a tiny baby girl of two years to toddle innocently over the arid wilderness alone. It is an interestingly heart-rending situation, and again last evening, when the cowboy foreman rode in sight, the big crowds gave vent to their emotions in loud and continuous applause. The society drama, "A Victim of Science," and humorous picture, such as "The Broker's Comedies," "Unlucky Interference" and "Samba As Footman," round out a first-class and varied entertainment, to say nothing of the illustrated song. Be early today for there will be half holiday crowds.

THE HAPPY HALF HOUR
Today will be the last chance to see, Picturesque Canada, A Slave's Love, the Oxford-Cambridge boat race, and I Must Forgive, and to hear Le Domino Rouge and Harry B. LeRoy sing Arrah-Wanna and those who have not seen this programme at the Happy Half Hour have missed a treat.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE
Another moving picture show, which promises to be a strong attraction, will open at the Opera House on Monday afternoon under the management of Harry Angus, who for some time has been connected with the Nickel. Performances will be given hourly, and in addition to an excellent line of films and illustrated songs, will be a strong specialty act and full orchestra, thus rounding out a first-class up-to-date entertainment, which should have the liberal patronage of the St. John public.
