Mr Foster next dealt with the question o the tariff policy of the Liberals had resulted in the development and increase of trade with the United States in a much greater ratio than with Great Britain. This was another example of their broken premises. that, in repudiating the party's action at Moncton, Mr. Tweedie, like the three are spent to keep the government in following that day and at his three square following that day and at his three square politics on Dominion lines, Mr. Foster said power, and none but government supmeals next day. Why? Because they all that did not mean that the Liberal conservative party, in power at Ottawa, would run the provincial Liberal Conservative government at Fredericton, using that government for federal party purposes. That was what was being done now by the Liberal party. Mr. Blair was running the provincial government at Fredericton in the interest of the Liberal party in Canada. What the Liberal respectfully s licit a continu to put an administration in power in Freder icton that would run the government on recognised Liberal-Conservative principles.
