4th Pioneers Soon to Leave
St. Andrews?—Rolf Nevers Prisoner in Germany—Movements of Officers.

Lieut. Frank E. Groves, A. A. G. of the New Brunswick command, returned from St. Andrews yesterday, having gone over the accounts of the 4th Pioneers. It is said that the Pioneers will leave St. Andrews very soon.

Major Leo McWilliams of the New Brunswick command, who has been attached to the 4th Pioneers as instructor in bayonet fighting, trench digging, and advanced warfare in general, has returned from St. Andrews and as soon as the 4th leave for overseas will be attached to the 236th Kilties.

Major Outhbert B. Morgan and Major Laurie, company commanders in the 236th Kilties, went to Fredericton yesterday on business in connection with their appointments.

Two car loads of clothing were shipped to Fredericton yesterday by Lieut. Col. A. H. Henderson of the ordnance office for the 236th Kilties.

A party of non-coms and men of the 140th Battalion, who have been on leave will be in St. John today en route to Valcartier in charge of Sergeant Hayward of Waasla.

There will also be in the party eight recruits, Privates Mason, Miller, McMillan, Frost, McMillan and three Indians, Poaches, Paul and Soble. A deserter from the 140th who was arrested in Woodstock will also be in the party under guard today en route to Valcartier.

Word has been received from England that Corporal Robert Hagens, who has been brought from the front as medical sergeant of the 236th, sailed from England for Canada on August 5th.

Major G. G. Geggie and Mrs. Geggie, with Col. Guthrie, Mrs. Guthrie and their children, Margaret, Ronald and Douglas, arrived in the city yesterday from Fredericton in Col. Guthrie's new automobile and are guests at the Royal.

Lieut. Col. W. H. Grey and deputy recruiting officer for Queen county, Sergeant James J. Jones, are at Ona-bog securing recruits for the No. 2 Construction Company. The officers are doing well and a large number of men have enlisted.

Col. J. L. McAvity of the 26th Battalion called at the Parks Convalescent Home yesterday with his automobile and took the boys of the 26th out for a pleasure trip. The party went to Col. McAvity's summer home at Red Head, and also to Mispeo and were royally entertained by the commander of the "Fighting 26th."

St. recruits for the No. 2 Construction Corps left for Picton on the Hal-fax express last night and a large assignment of colored residents and other citizens were at the depot to give the boys a send off. The St.
John brass band was on hand and rendered a number of selections before the train left.

G. B. Nevers of Lower Jemseg has received from Major McLean of the 4th C. M. R. his son Rolf's address, which is given below: Prisoner of war, No. 111390, Sergeant R. K. Nevers, D. Company, 4th C. M. R. Battalion, Res Lay V. Krieger-schule, Hanover, Germany.

Sergeant Nevers was captured during the battle on June 2nd.

THE CHARGE OF THE NORTH- BERLAND FUSILIERS—"Scream- ing Death."

The following story of the charge of the Northumberland Fusiliers is written by a former member of the Daily Express staff, who is now serving in France.

British guns, like the running brook, seem to go on for ever these days. There is no respite, no rest for the enemy, and at times it makes one feel almost sorry for him.

No adjectives, however lurid, could convey to the average lay mind the furore of a modern artillery concentration. But if I tell you that some of our men were walking about our trenches with a fixed stare in their eyes, with their lips drawn across their nerves, and that others were sitting on the ground, holding their throbbing temples in both hands, you will be able to form some idea of the effect of the sound alone on the nerves.

The Attack.

The Northumberland Fusiliers were to attack at 8.30 on Saturday morning. The troops took up their positions late on Friday night. Minute instructions were given out by platoon commanders to their subordinates, and two days' rations were issued to each man; smoke helmets were examined for the fifth time in four days, and bayonets were roughly re-pointed on stones. Nothing was to be left to chance. The village was to be wrested from the Huns, and north countrymen had been chosen for the task. North countrymen, too, were in the party, for the price in blood if need be. It did not one's heart good to see these big-boned, stern-visaged Northumbrians smirking like children going to a school treat at the prospect of facing death on the morrow.

At dawn bread and cheese and jam were served out. The two days' rations were to be kept intact in the event of emergencies. Everybody ate well, for fighting is hungry work, and a man feels braver with his stomach full. Although we had but a few holes at the bayonet point. The majority of them, to avoid the cold steel, had thrown up the trembling hands and bent their backs to the ground.
one sulked section behind to guard them.

The top of the hill was reached at last, and the village by before them lay in ruins. The Germans with machine guns seemed to be in every broken cottage, and a sniper in every shell-hole. Bullets were humming round their ears, and a raging thirst parched their mouths.
For many in that crunch the shell-scattered streets and broken cottages began to go round and round.

The earth came up to meet me and a black mist swam before my eyes.
The strident cries of "Stretcher-bearer" sounded daily in my ears and awoke no pity within me. I could vaguely see red-eyed men in khaki rushing past me . . . and the tide of battle rolled on.

But who was that shouting in the distance? North-countrymen? It was broad enough and strong enough, and surely it was a shout of victory!

THE WOODS OF DEATH

The Village Taken.

Charging over ground littered by high-explosive shells is no joke, even when the "charge" is only at a walking pace, or at the fastest a trot, and the men stumbled many times before they reached the enemy's lines.

The German artillery concentrated as the Fusiliers debouched from their trenches, and the machine guns began to whirl. Many fell, but the others never flinched.

Bullets were throwing up the dust all around in little grey puffs. Sharpshooting overhead in blinding flashes, stinging down death. But the Fusiliers had to take the village because they had been chosen to do so. Their gallant officer fell within twenty yards of the enemy's trenches. His left arm was blown away and a bullet was through his chest. He stumbled a few yards, mortally wounded though he was, but fell at last. Then he raised himself somehow on his knees and pointed the little cane he carried in his right hand to the village, high up on the crest of the hill. There was no need for him to speak. The gesture so full of meaning and the glorious spirit shining from his dying eyes told their own tale.

His men took the first trench quite easily. The barbed wire defenses had completely disappeared. A few screaming Boches were bayoneted, and then our men were over and beyond. It would have been better if they had spent a little more time exploring the enemy's dugouts, for as soon as they had gone the rat-a-tat-tat of a machine gun behind told them that some of the Boches had been left alive. The remainder of the advance was up a fairly steep hill, down the slopes of which bullets poured like rain, and men began to wonder how any one could possibly hope to live in such a death trap.

When the second line defenses were reached the Germans put up a stiffer fight. Some of them, with more heart than the rest, came out with bomb and bayonet, but they met their inevitable fate. No German is much use in hand-to-hand fighting, however good his heart may be. The second line trenches were cleared. The Boches had been driven like rats from their holes at the bayonet point. The ma-
and bent their backs to the ground.
guard them.

vey. It would seem, that while the war lasts there will be an increased demand for meats of all kinds, for eggs, poultry and dairy products, particularly cheese. After the war is over there will be some readjustments that cannot now be foreseen, but through the enormous destruction of live stock in Europe, and the tremendous draughts that have been made on the surplus products of the rest of the world, there must result an enhanced value in live stock of all kinds.
There may be some uncertainty as to market conditions of grain after the war, but not so as to live stock and live stock products.

Horses Bolt.

The horses attached to a wagon belonging to the Dominion Express Company ran away in Pond street yesterday morning being frightened by a shunting engine. The wagon came in collision with one of Wm. Donahue's coaches and the latter was badly damaged.
