

FISHING ON THE GRAND BANKS.

their small boats or dories, taking with them a supply of lines and baited hooks, and leaving, perhaps, only the boys on board the schooner to bait the lines for next day and to do the house-work of their floating home. In the evening the boats return with their catch, and are lifted on board. Then, after a hasty supper, "dressing down" begins. The