An improved model of colonist sleeping car is being adopted by the Canadian Pacific company. In future the old wooden seats will no longer be in vogue, but strong leather-covered seats provided. A division will be made for the berths when in use and fixtures to permit of curtains being hung, also fitted. The cars will be vestibuled, assuring greater safety to passengers going from one car to another in transit. Some four cars of this new pattern are at present in use, and their output is being rapidly pushed.
