Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A COOK'S OPINION.

She Was Inclined to Believe That Darwin Was a Loafer.

There is an amusing story told in Mrs. Walford's "Memories of Victorian London" concerning Darwin, the great scientist, and his cook, Darwin apparently possessed a very poor appetite, and one day Mrs. Darwin consulted with her cook as to the means by which it might be tempted.

"He does not seem to fancy ordinary food," she said. "Try to think of something."

The cook looked up and down, and twirled her apron. "If you'll excuse the liberty I'm taking, ma'am, I should say that master would be able to take his food better if he got something to do. Idle folks is never hungry."

"But your master is not an idle man," protested Mrs. Darwin, indignant at such a charge. "He is never idle. In my opinion he works too hard."

"Excuse me, ma'am," replied the cook, "but if I may make bold as to say so, I can't agree to that. With my own eyes I see him in the garden yesterday starting at a leaf for over two whole hours! Two whole hours! Well, that ain't work, anyhow."

Equally amusing is a story mentioned by Mrs. Walford as being told by the celebrated Dr. Guthrie, of one of his brother ministers pitted against an up-to-date young man.

Quoth the latter to his clerical friend: "Why do you have such doleful Psalm-singing in your Scotch kirk?"

"Well, you see, we don't think it doleful," returned the other, cautiously feeling his way. "We are fond of our old tunes. And—brightening up—'they are very old, you know. 'I dare say.' They are none the better for that."

As was natural, the young man laughed at such a plea; but the minister had not done with it. "The belief is—mind you, I am only telling you what the belief is among our poor people—that our tunes, our old Psalm tunes, are the very ones that David himself played upon his harp."

"Are they?" Quick as lightning the other turned upon him. "Are they? Then, by gum, I don't wonder at Saul throwing the javelin."

Queen's Old Furniture.

Queen Mary has been giving her views upon old furniture, and these have come as a shock to London collectors. Some time ago the Queen ordered a clean sweep to be made of the old-fashioned equipments of her private apartments at Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle, and these all have been replaced by modern articles, with the result that the rooms now present an air of lightness and comfort that they never possessed previously.

As I have asked what should be done with the furniture thus removed, her Majesty quietly remarked that the best course would be to burn it. The Queen has one hobby, and that is a large collection of old silver.

Curiously enough, there is no one in the royal family who displays any liking for old furniture, though the Queen herself some years ago made a collection of articles of the Marie Antoinette period, the drawing-rooms at Sandringham being filled with the results of her purchases. Queen Victoria, on the other hand, was greatly devoted to old furniture of every description and all periods.

Origin of the "Amen Corner."

The origin of the expression, "amen corner," is traced to England, where prior to the reformation, upon Corpus Christi day, a procession of the clergy, starting from St. Paul's Cathedral, marching through Cheapside, commenced at the end of the street to chant "Our Father," or "Pater Noster."

Along the whole length of the thoroughfare were known as "amen corners," where they gave voice to this ancient anthem, so timing themselves that the amen would be reached at the corner, which to this day is known as the "Amen Corner."

The 20th century definition of the term "amen corner," however, is nothing more than a lounging place consecrated to the discussion of things and events of political significance and otherwise.

Nearly every tavern, hotel or club of any importance in Great Britain has had or has an "amen corner," and the histories, recollections and anecdotes of the same would fill many a large-sized volume.

Dining-room For Dogs.

The proprietress of a restaurant at Poulton Square, Chelsea, Eng., who found that many of her customers had their dogs at the same table, and in some cases allowed them to eat from their plates on the floor, has established a separate dining-room for dogs. While their mistresses are having luncheon or dinner the pets are placed in a separate room, where they are fed with mutton bones, cooked beef, etc. A dog's dinner costs three-pence, and the animal is allowed to select his dish and to eat his fill.

His Ancestors.

An Irish gentleman was once attended by an eminent London physician, who, pausing and looking at him with an inquiring glance, said: "I should like to know, sir, if your family have been long lived?"

"Long lived, is it?" responded the patient thoughtfully. "Well, doctor, I'll just tell you how it is. Our family is a west of Ireland family, and the age of my ancestors depended entirely on the judge and jury who tried them."—Strand Magazine.

Lost Hours.

Urging the need for spelling reform in an address at St. Bride's Institute, London, recently, Prof. Walter Riggman said it had been calculated that the English child took on the average 2,300 hours to learn his speech, the German 1,800, and the Russian child less than 1,000. We were giving away 1,000 hours of every child's life to our competitors, and we called ourselves a business nation!

THE NAVY ISSUE

"Before the division bells ring Ottawa to-morrow night the position would do well to insist on a final word from Mr. Bordeau to the tendency of his post. The supreme issue before the people of Canada to-day is whether shall defend ourselves on the sea as well as on land or hire our defence by contributing money to the British navy. Mr. Bordeau, most influential supporter of Ontario are 'one-navy' men. To ridicule the idea that Canadians learn to build or man ships of within any reasonable period, time. They cheered Mr. Bordeau when he declared that in his opinion nothing of an efficient character could be built up in this country within a quarter or perhaps half a century."—Toronto Globe.

The splendid facilities for built war vessels in the Old Land have been the development of very many years. The same thing is true of naval yards of Germany. The construction of a Dreadnought, with its magnificent equipment, is something to be done offhand, or by nations on the say so—that's several other countries go to John Bull for theirs. The idea that Dominion could at once lay the keel for one, not to say such leviathans of the deep, is silly assignee.

Then as to officers, petty officers, gunners, artificers, and all the of the complement. These men only evolved after years of training and in any event, Laurier's toy has demonstrated that Canadians such, do not take kindly to man war discipline.

The Toronto Globe is just as astray on this subject as it is on reciprocity, and what could be written than that?
