FINDING A WAY.

(Annie L. Hannah, in Forward.)

'I am sorry to be obliged to say it, Mrs Grant, but it is best that you should know. With this rheumatic trouble which has developed your husband will be unfitted for out-of-door work in any but the mildest weather, and I must warn you of the extreme danger of over-exertion on his part. With careful attention in these respects, warm clothing and gentle exercise, there is no reason why he should not pass a comfortable winter. Good afternoon!

When Hester returned from seeing the doctor out (he was a new physician, and he had no idea of the crushing blow which his words had given) she found her mother sitting with hands clasped in her lap, with an expression of despair and her eyes fixed upon a photograph which stood on the sitting-room table.

'I knew it!' was the girl's inward exclamation. 'I was sure that would be her first thought! Poor Tom! poor, dear, patient Tom! But it shall not be. Mother,' going up behind her and clasping her hands over her mother's eyes, 'you mustn't do it, you mustn't look like that or you will break my heart. I know that you are thinking that there is nothing to do but call Tom back from college—though it would break your heart to do that—but, dearie, we're not going to do that, not for all the world! I don't know,' as her mother glanced into the pretty face with question in her eyes, 'what can be done; I have not had time to think yet; but something must and shall be done. Tom has worked too hard and faithfully,' she went on, bringing a low stool and sitting down at her mother's feet with her arms folded across her lap,' to carry himself through college to give it up for any such reason. Yes, I know that we cannot afford to pay a man to take father's place; I know that we have had all we could do to get along as it was, without that added expense, small though it would be.

'We could get Bob Simpson to come to us for the winter for a very little—but then where is that little to come from? I don't know yet—but of this one thing I am sure, and that is that Tom shall not give up the hope of his life—that a first-rate doctor shall not be lost to the world because of the want of a few dollars. Dear, brave old Tom! Can't you see him now, mother, as he stood there the night before he left home, telling us that in a few years we should all sit with our hands folded in our laps (I cannot imagine a more blissful prospect, can you?) while he worked for us? No, no! Tom shall not come home whatever happens,' and she reached up her hand and patted her mother's cheek lovingly. 'Why, that would be killing the goose which is to lay the golden egg, you know.'

'Oh, Hester!' her mother exclaimed 'what a comfort you are! Perhaps you're all wrong, but it's a comfort to hear you say it. We will let the matter rest here to-night at least hoping that God will show us the way out of our difficulties. And now, dear, I must go and see if father is awake.' But she bent down before going and folded Hester close in her arms, calling her her brave, bright girl.

But in spite of the brave words the prospect before them looked far darker and more hopeless to Hester than she would have her mother imagine, and through many wakeful hours of that night and all the following day the question continued to present itself. What was to be done? What could she do? But though she puzzled and thought and contrived the evening came, and yet no solution had presented itself. Her father had not been so well during the day; several little irritating things had occurred, and all this, together with the loss of sleep the night before, and the ever-present, ever-strengthening anxiety had so wrought upon Hester's nerves that she was conscious of the fact that but a very little more would suffice to open the flood gates.

'I'll write my letter to Tom, and go to bed before I disgrace myself and break mother's heart,' she finally decided. 'And then if I still want to be a baby—well, the pillows won't tell, and may stop this dreadful ache in my throat.'

But she had hardly seated herself to the by no means easy task of writing a bright, cheerful letter to Tom, with a heart as heavy as lead, when she heard the sound of sleigh-bells, noticed that they ceased before the house, and that the next moment a tap had sounded on the door.

'Shall I go, dear?' asked her mother, who was sitting at the other side of the lamplit table. 'You have just begun your letter.'

'No, of course not. But I know what it is; it's somebody wanting something to eat. Mother, I wish we didn't live on the best wheeling and sleighing road in the country! I think I have opened that door no less than a hundred times during the past year to tell people on wheels or in sleighs that we don't keep an inn. If I had a dollar for every time—oh, mother.'

What was it that put that sudden breathless tone into Hester's voice and sent her with beating heart and sparkling eyes into the passage as the tap sounded a second time?

A gentleman was standing at the door when she opened it, and she could see in the bright moonlight which flooded the snowy road, that another gentleman and two ladies remained in the sleigh.

'I beg your pardon,' the gentleman said, 'but could you—would it be possible for you to give us a cup of coffee and some light refreshment? We have come from L. (fifteen miles away) and this splendid air has given us a marvellous appetite. Of course,' hastily, and with some embarrassment, 'you must allow me to pay you for the trouble, if you will be so kind as to supply our need. To be sure, I know that it is asking a great deal, but—'

'We never have done it, said Hester, smiling, 'but if you will wait just a moment I will go and ask mother.' And in another moment she was back in the sitting room, with her arms about her mother's neck, her cheek pressed close to hers.

'Mother,' she whispered, 'please do not ask me a single question till afterwards, but there are four people outside wanting coffee and something to eat. If you will bring them in here I will go and put the coffee on, and cut bread for sandwiches.'

With one look of utter astonishment but without a word, her mother rose and left the room, and twenty minutes later the sleighing party were served by her with such sandwiches, crullers and coffee as, they one and all declared, they had never before tasted.

'It didn't seem fair to take it, Hester,' her mother said, coming into the kitchen when they had gone, 'but they begged me for all the crullers I had left, about three dozen (how fortunate it was that I had just made them to-day), and would not listen to giving me less,' and she laid a crisp two-dollar bill on the table beside which the girl sat. 'Why, child, what is it,' she added hastily, for at sight of the money, poor, overtired, excited Hester had flung herself forward on the table, and with her head in her arms was sobbing wildly.

'I couldn't help it, mother,' she explained when she was able to look up and speak. 'Don't look so troubled, dear, it is only gladness! I have been worrying so about it all day, and all the time the way was going to be so easy. Oh, mother, don't you understand? Don't you see that our way is clear before us? And jumping up she drew her mother down into a low rocking-chair and knelt beside her.

'Mrs Grant, suppose that we had a dollar, fifty cents, twenty-five cents from every person who has asked for a meal at our door during the past two years? Ah! you are beginning to see the light, are you?' with a laugh as a little color came into her mother's pale cheeks. 'Yes, that is my plan—at least part of it. The rest is that Bob—blessed Bob, who is to be engaged to-morrow!—shall make me a light frame over which I shall stretch white muslin with an announcement to passers by, day and by night (for at night it will be converted into a transparench), that coffee and other good things are to be procured within. It will cost us almost nothing, for we have our own chickens, eggs and ham, and when the summer comes we shall add fruit and cooling drinks. No, don't speak yet. I know you are going to say that you will not allow me to wait on anybody who happens to come along. All right, you can do the waiting, if you'd rather, and I will stay in the kitchen, and prepare things.'

'Oh, mother! to think how I grumbled over the very thing that was the greatest blessing which could have come to us—that I was just about to shut the door, literally, in the face of a most splendid opportunity. 'Mother,' with a laugh which was within reaching distance of tears, 'the next time I go hunting a blessing I shall not take a spy-glass and search the stars for it, I shall simply open the door and let it in.'

Skin was on Fire with Eczema

For twelve years a dreadful sufferer, but now entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema's itch is torture, the skin seems on fire with the burning, stinging humor; at times it becomes almost unbearable, and in desperation you could tear the skin to pieces. You dare not exercise for fear of aggravating the itching, neither can you sleep, for no sooner does the body become warm than the trouble begins, and instead of restful refreshing sleep, it is scratch, scratch, scratch all night long.

MR. ALEX. McDOUGALL, postmaster, Broad Cove Marsh, N.S., writes:—"For twelve years I was a great sufferer from eczema on the inside of the leg. There was a raw patch of flesh about three inches square, and the itching was something fearful. Dr. Chase's Ointment completely cured me, took away the itching and healed up the sore. I have no hesitation in recommending it as a wonderful cure for itching skin disease."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

ACHES AND PAINS.

Are Merely Symptoms of Disease and Must be Treated Through the Blood.

If you suffer with pain—any kind of pain—keep in mind that pain is but a symptom, not a disease; that what you must fight is not the pain but its cause; that liniments and oils for external application are absolutely useless. To overcome the cause of pain internal treatment is necessary. Pains, no matter where located, will disappear when you purify and enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves. Aches and pains disappear as if by magic when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are used. Every dose actually makes new, rich, red blood, which drives disease from the system and banishes pain. Thousands and thousands of grateful people have given their testimony to prove this. Mr George Cary, Tilbury, Ont., says:—For a whole summer I suffered terribly from sciatica. The pain was something awful, and I could scarcely bear to have anything touch my leg. I took medicine from two doctors, and tried a number of recommended remedies, but derived no benefit. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this medicine helped me almost from the start, and soon released me from the trouble, and I have not since had a twinge of it. I therefore have great reason to praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sciatica, rheumatism, neuralgia and all other aches and pains are completely driven from the system, through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Don't take any pink colored substitute; see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around the box. If in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co, Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Paying the Children.

Parents who have the true welfare of their children at heart refuse to allow them to accept pay for every act of service to others. The danger is that a child who habitually receives money for doing errands will soon consider it unfair to ask him to do anything without pay.

Selfishness and greed are liable to start into life and leave small chance for the growth of that impulse of helpfulness which in later life might be a source of his greatest joy. If a neighbor will enter into an agreement with him to do the errands by the week, to carry milk, letters, or whatever they may be, for a certain fixed price, he will be working on a strictly business basis, and no harm can come of it.

On the contrary, his self-respect will be strengthened. His longing to be man like, to earn and spend his own money will be gratified. He will also be learning the relative value of money and labor, says the Chicago News.

We decry the commercial spirit, but sooner or later the boy must do battle with it. It won't hurt him to have a little tussle with it while under the parental eye. A pleasant, obliging boy is a treasure in a neighborhood.

The best way for neighbors to show their appreciation of him is to be his friend, to like him and let him know it, to make him presents occasionally to relieve their own sense of obligation, but let the equality of friendship be sustained by the free asking and granting of favors.

Stomach Troubles.

A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore the more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by G. V. Wolfville Streets.

REPORT OF THE STREETS COMMITTEE FOR 1903.

TO THE MAYOR AND COUNCILLORS OF THE TOWN OF WOLFVILLE:

GENTLEMEN,—The Committee on Public Property, Roads and Bridges of the Town of Wolfville for the year ending December 31st, 1903, respectfully submit the following report

At the beginning of the year, the Council voted that the sum of sixteen hundred dollars be placed at the disposal of your committee for the maintenance and improvement of the streets and bridges within our town, and the labor sheets for this year show an expenditure of eleven hundred and fifty-nine dollars and eighty-one cents, for men and for horses and carts and including the working of the road machine and roller, but not the work of our town horse, the above amount has been dispersed in the following manner:

J. J. Ellis	$312 00
Ralph Hardwick	113 82
Reuben Wagner	131 97
Irid Kennie & Son	91 94
John Gould & Sons	47 85

The sum of $125.37 has been paid out for the maintenance of the horse, for hay, oates, short feed and repairs to carts, harness, etc. For lumber for bridges and repairs, for vetrified crock for bridges, for flag stone and for repairs to machine and tools, etc., $213.19. [illegible] expenditure of $1501.37 by [illegible] committee, deduct this amount from the amount of $1600.00 which the Council voted for street purposes, and we are pleased to report that there is still a balance to the credit of your committee of $98.63. In addition to the above report your committee think it best to enumerate the amounts expended on the various streets and avenues of the town. Maple avenue required but little attention this year. The same may be said of Orchard and Cherry avenues. Willow avenue received some attention and an expenditure of $80.00. Franklin and Locust avenues used up $10.00 each. Westwood avenue cost us $10.00 for repairs. On University avenue we laid out $25.00 for crock for bridges and repairs to street. On Highland avenue and sidewalks we spent $30.00, and on Linden avenue $5.00. Central avenue from Front street to Main street has been covered with stone and gravel from the town pit, and is a good solid road, expenditure $20.00; and on the south end, from Prospect street, we used the road machine, and covered the sidewalk with cinders, at a cost of $10.00. Commencing on Gaspereau avenue at the railroad, we covered it with broken stone from the town pit, using about 100 loads, and it is now one of the best roads in town, and from Acadia street to Willow avenue we raised the road about ten inches with about 500 loads of stone and gravel. From Pleasant street north to the cemetery gate we graded the road with broken stone from Sherwood's Quarry, using some 200 loads; with repairs to sidewalk with cinders, and a bridge at the junction of Prospect street, we expended $200.00. Pleasant street required but little attention, and therefore the outlay was only $10.00. Prospect street had been dug up by the sewer contractor, and was in a very bad condition, and we found that it was necessary to raise the road with stone and gravel. About 400 loads was hauled from the town pit and broken by laborers with malls, the sidewalk on the north side was also raised about ten inches with material from Toye's Hill, the total expenditure on this street being $190.00. On Summer street we did not spend a dollar. The fact is, this street requires some hundreds of dollars laid out on it, but help was so scarce this season that your committee was badly handicapped all the year. On Main street, at Johnson Hollow, we used 100 loads of broken rock, at the west end we put in a bridge of 15 inch vetrified pipe, the sidewalks were raised in a number of places, holes and low places were filled from time to time, the street was levelled up with the road machine, and the gutters cleaned several times. Total outlay $200.00. The road machine was used on nearly all the streets, and cost for operating $79.00. Front street was in bad shape after the contractors finished their work, your committee first rounded the road well up with the road machine and then covered it 12 feet wide and 10 inches thick with stone and gravel, which cost $88.00; and although most of the heavy teaming has passed over this street for the last three months, the road is in good condition and the best piece of road in town. Elm avenue was also treated the same as Front street, the outlay being about $30.00. Your committee obtained permission from the railway authorities to construct a piece of road from Front street to the D. A. R. station, which has been partly carried out—the bridges have been put in and the road and sidewalks are fairly passable, but require some gravel and cinders, the expenditure to date being $8.80. There has been a miscellaneous expenditure of $96.00 for clearing snow, repairing bridges, and cutting grass, trees, limbs, etc. There is also a quantity of crock for bridge purpose on hand and hay and oats sufficient to keep the horse for months, all of which have been paid for out of this year's expenditure.

WAKEFUL BABIES.

No baby cries for the fun of the thing. It cries because it is not well—generally its little stomach is sour, its bowels congested, its skin hot and feverish. This is often why babies are wakeful and make nights miserable for the parents. Relieve the little one and it will sleep all night, and let the mother rest as well. Just what mothers need for this purpose is Baby's Own Tablets—a medicine that speedily relieves and promptly cures all the minor ailments of young children. The experience of thousands of mothers has proved the truth of this, and among these mothers is Mrs James Farrel, Banberry, Ont., who says: 'I think Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine in the world for little ones. My baby was cross and gave me a good deal of trouble, but since using the tablets I could not wish for a healthier or better natured child.'

Stronger praise could not be given, and the mother has a guarentee that the Tablets contain no opiate or harmful drug. Sold by medicine dealers or sent post paid at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
