Sweet Norine

"Have you any what, Mrs. Barrison wants of me?" asked Carlisle, throwing off his sealskin coat, impatiently. "That is what I hear every hour in the day, it seems to me."

Miss Austin laughted a sweet little musical laugh.

"I should not wonder if it was to show you her new backgammon set that arrived an hour since. I—I may as well tell you a little tiny secret—the dear old lady is intensely fond of the game. In playing backgammon she never realizes the flight of time. She would play from now until midnight, ceaselessly, even forgetting that there is such a thing as meal time for herself or any one else."

Carlisle groaned.

even forgetting that there is such a thing as meal time for herself or any one else. Carlisle groaned.

"I see my finish if she were ever to find out that I understood the game, which, by the way, I have a great horror of," he declared, adding, eagerly: "Will you not come to my rescue in this affair, my dear Miss Austin? Say that I have gone to my room with a raging head ache, Indeed, that would not be an untruth, you know, for the very thought of spending half an hour over that most stupid of games renders me in that condition. Induce her to look for a martyr clsewhere."

"If I play on the guitar for her that will cause her to drop to sleep at once, and that would deprive you of her so ciety the entire evening," she murmured, artfully.

"Never mind me: do not consider me in the matter, I beg of you," he amswered quickly. "To my mind, sleep is better than medicine for the indisposed. Play your guitars by all means, for this one evening, at least, and I shall appreciate it, I assure you."

Miss Austin blushed deeply.

Miss Austin blushed deeply.

Miss Austin blushed deeply.

It is strange on what a light remark, falling from a man's lips, a woman who is desperately in love with him will build her hopes.

"I will try to have it as you desire," murmured Florise, and her be conflagration. Perhaps it was the wine conflagration.

build her hopes.

"I will try to have it as you desire," murmured Florice, and her heart beat with feverish triumph.

She told herself that the hour was not far distant when he would declare himself.

Already she could see herself in fancy the wife of this handsome, debonair young man, the heir of the vast Barrison wealth.

In Clifford Carlisle she had met her match—the one man on earth whom she could have loved madly, passionately, for himself, if he had not had a dollar on earth—and while he seemed to admire on earth—and while he seemed to admire

In Clifford Carlisle she had met her match—the one man en earth whom she could have loved madly, passionately, for himself, if he had not had a dollar on earth—and while he seemed to admire her as all other men whom she had met did, he seemed in no great hurry to make love to her; and this annoyed her visibly. They dined together, alone in the big, bleak dining-room, as they had been accustomed to do.

But instead of Clifford Carlisle samtering to Mrs. Barrison's boudoir, immulating himself upon the altar of duty by passing the evening there, he went instead quickly to his own apartment. Miss Austin lost no time in gathering her music together; mot bright, tuneful, inspiring music. but instead drowsy, dragging melodies, that would have the soporific effect of putting a person to sleep if anything could.

But for the first time since the young girl had been beneath that roof the old lady proved perverse.

"Put down your guitar and talk tome, Florice," she exclaimed, petulantly." I am not in the mood for music timight."

Miss Austin bit her lip, and a strange, angry pleam came into her sharp, green blace even that the long yellow lashes.

But the long yellow lashes to the young and the poor young mother and little infant dragged out in the nick of time. The proved perverse.

That was indeed heroism!" exclaimed Mrs. Barrison, her curiosity getting the better of her deep resolve not to allow any of the vilage paspenings to interest her, "the mother and infant escaped of course."

Their lives were saved by almost a miracle, ma', and Esther, solemuly. "It appears that the young mother in first and the passing and at the risk of this person's life, an entrance was made through the blinding moke, and the poor young mother and little infant dragged out in the nick of time. If happened along just then and stood guard over the two while this person went into the burning building and excluding the provided perverse.

The revealed Mrs. Barrison, better of her deep resolve not to allow any of the vilage papenings to interest

"Took knows it should," thought Esther, to summon him here."

Again Miss Austin's heart beat with silent rage. That meant that the quiet evening she had promised herself with Cliffeed Carlisle would begin and end in her devastated hopes.

A smalden thought came to her. She would or not. She wendered that this way out of her difficulty had not occurred to her an hour before.

Of course Cliffeed Carlisle was waiting for her down in the parlor, wondering with all a man's imputience why she did not put in an appearance.

With the noiseless, gliding motion peculiar to her, Miss Austin crossed over to the cabinest at the other end of the room where the medicines and liquors were kept.

"Lat me pour yen out a glass of wine, my dear Mrs. Barrison," she murmured.
"The might is so cell, it is even perceptible in this warner room; I think it will do you good."

"As you will, my dear Florice," replied the old findy; "I think myself something stimulating would not come amiss.
"Perhaps I had better give you a little handy," suggested Miss Austin.
"No, the wine will do. The brandy night make me ducasy, and I do not wish to sleep; I have so much to talk with Cliffeed absott."

"You shall skeep, and that speedily, jos, if I can have any way about it, next teed to her red do hardy night make me ducasy, and I do not wish to sleep; I have so much to talk with Cliffeed absott."

Esther did as she was bidden; poured out the wine, but the moment her mistress put it to her lips she set it down quickly again, muttering: "This does not taste bitter like the last. I knew there was something the matter with that last

SIX MEN TERRIBLY BURNED IN BROOKLYN MILL.

Spark From Grinding Mill Ignited Powdered Sulphur, and the Ex-

New York, Feb. 29 .- Six employees in the National Sulphur Company's mill in Brooklyn were terribly burned and lacerated by the explosion of sulphur in the company's plant today. A driver of a passing truck was struck and had his skull fractured by a section of the roof, which was blown off the building. The factory was destroyed by fire with a loss of about $100,000.

The six employees were at work in the milling section grinding the sulphur, when, it is supposed, a spark from one of the grinding machines ignited the powdered sulphur, causing a series of heavy explosions. The rear wall of the mill was burst, one of the side walls was bulged outward until it threatened to crush a small building adjoining, and a section of the roof was torn off and thrown 120 feet over the front portion of the mill into the middle of the street.

The six victims were found unconscious by the other employees, who rushed into the milling room after the explosion. Much of their clothing had been torn off by the explosion and their bodies were terribly torn and burned.

Old Esther hastened to obey. Her prompt action saved her mistress. She called no one to her aid, though Mrs. Barrison grew strangely ill during the next few minutes, but in half an hour's time she was so relieved that she was her old self again. St. George, Grenada, British West Indies, March 1.-When the negro Benjamin, who was sentenced two days ago out assault last year on Norman Lock hard, Colonial Treasurer and Comptroller of Customs, was being removed from jail yesterday, the blacks gathered around him in a threatening manner, and with evidence of great excitement inveighed against the severity of his sentence.

They threw stones at the armed policemen, who were escorting the condemned man. Governor Williams, who was present endeaviring to pacify the crowd was struck by a black. This so enraged one of the policemen that he started to drive his bayonet through the Governor's assailant. He was restrained, however, and the man was arrested.

Many other arrests followed, and order finally was restored. One man was slightly wounded. A British mon-o'-war arrived shortly after the ce-

There were sixteen present. The meeting was opened with the Lord's Prayer. The minutes of the supplementary meeting were read by the secretary. Mrs. J. Moore played an instrumental solo, which was much appreciated; Mrs. J. Clough read a paper on "Cream and Butter, Their Uses and Value:" Mrs. W. J. Guyatt and Miss Grace Kelly, sang a duet, which pleased the meeting very much. During intermission a collection of fancy work was introduced by the President, Mrs. R. Barlow, and was carefully examined and discussed by the ladies. The question drawer, in charge of Mrs. J. Clough, was opened, and some very helpful and interesting information was obtained. Miss Jean McIlwraith delighted the ladies with some of her recitations. The Glee Club sang one of its selections in good style. The meeting was then brought to a close by singing "God Save the King." The next meeting will be held on March 25th in the Temperance Hall at 2.30 sharp. The members of the Hannon Institute are expected, and will provide the programme. All are invited to attend.
