THE WIDOW'S SONG.

BY T. R. HERVEY.

This world is a wide one, for sorrow or joy; And where in this world is my lost sailor boy, With his load ringing laugh, and his long samay hair? Do they swell on the breze yet, or float through the air? Is there any bright land, "mid the lands of the ourth, That holds the lost child of my beart and my hearth?

I have sat by the fire when the old men have said, There be eyes of the living that look on the dead. Of tell me, ye seers in search of the temb, Do ye find my fair son in its valley of gloom? Its there any pails bey with a look of the sen "Mid that people of shades, who is waiting for me?

O, that morn when he left us! Mine eyes have grown dim, And esen little that's bright since they looked upon him ; And my heart, in its duliness, hath learned to forget But the light of that morning shines clean to it yet: No record is lost of the bright sunny day, When passed my fair boy like a spirit away.

We waited—how long! but we waited in vain! And we looked over land and we looked over main, And ships, O! how many came home from the sea, That brought comfort to others, but serrow to me. In all these gay ships, O! there answer was none To the mother who asks, if she yet have a soo! if she yet have a son!

They tell me of countries beyond the broad sea, Where stars look on others that look not on me; Where the flowers are more sweet, and the waters more And they hint that he dwells in these valleys of light.— That he reats in a home with some fair foreign bride, This world is a wide one-why is it so wide? more bright,

But they surely forget—which my sailor does not— That I'm sitting whole years is my lone little cot. He knows, O! he knows, If I may, I shall wait Till I hear his clear shout at the low garden gate; He is sure his sed mether will strive not to die Till the latch has been raised by her lost sailor boy.

I believe that he lives. Were he laid in the mould, There's a pulse in my heart would be silent and cold: Which awoke at his birth, and, through good and through ill, Has played in its depths, and is playing there still. When its star shall have set, then that tide will be dry, And the widew be sure where to look for her boy!

NEW USE FOR ICE.—The Scientific men of France are at pre-emt speculating on a recent instance of a young man brought to life after being frozen up eleven months on the Alps. It has given rise to a revived belief in the theory, that life can be suspended at pleasure and criminals are about to be demanded of the Government to be frozen on experiment. The reader will already have inferred what a reliaf this offers to such unhappy ladies as find themselves not con-temporary with the hearts they sigh to win.—They have only to be leed ill overtaken. We should add, however, that the above is by no means a jeke. The blood of a living man was infused into the veins of a frozen youth and he moved and spoke. The exper-iment was afterwards tried on a hare, frozen for the purpose, with complete success.

complete success. The Home Journal suggests the idea of patting the discovery into practical use, that is, put out $500 at interest, and have yourself packed in ice, and stay frozen, with suspended life, till it amounts to a fortune.
