BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

"I want no harp in heaven," he said, While his swarthy fingers swept the string And his song on the welkin broke; While his garments fluttered in the bree Till his shrunken breast was bare, As he faced the crowd with a sickly smile And braved the cold March air.

He had carried the harp for many a day, And his back the burden knew, And his tender heart the scornful jeers Of many an idle crew. Of the blows in anger given, And in his innocence he thought "Twould be the same in héaven.

He thought of his mother far away And wondered if they would meet again When his singing days were o'er. He thought of the time when he had playe As he ate his bit on the cold stone steps. And wiped the tears away.

"I may not sing and play up there

And rest, rest, when my work is In the sunny groves of balm: I'd like to find my mother there, And my brothers, sisters, seven I shall have no harp in heaven!

Jones was well aware that his wife was in the habit or rifing his pockets while he was asleep, but, like a wise man, he kept silence on the subject. One night, however, he awoke and caught her in the act. 'Ha,' he exclaimed, 'what are you doing, my dear?

The lady started, her cheeks flushed, the pantaloons dropped from her grasp, and she was about to make a full confession when a bright idea entered head.

Recovering her composure, she said:

I was looking to see whether your pantaloons needed any button.

They do, they do, my dear,' he exclaimed, springing from bed; 'needed em for weeks, months, and I wondered ed, for I was sure you would come to it sometime. And how kind of you to get out of bed at this time of night to attend to 'era' Say what you will, there's nothing in the world like a good wife. Let me turn up the gas a little, so's you have all the light you want in sewing 'em on. Got your needle and thread and the buttons? No. Well, tell me where they are, and I'll get them for you.'
Mrs. Jones proceeded to sew on the buttons, while her husband sat on the Just remember this now. There is edge of the bed and encouraged her with nothing that you can ever do that will words of praise for her wifely care and remarking that, go where he would, he would always say there was nothing in the world like a good wife.

with a weary sigh, removed the thimble from her finger, Mr. Jones patted her on the cheek and said:

'I say it again, my dear, say it again, that wherever I go I will make it known, proclaim it from the housetops, about it in the highways and byways, that a wife who gets up in the middle of the night to sew buttons on her husband's clothes is priceless treasure, a crown to that husband, and an ornament to her sex.

Then Mr. Jones, chuckling to himself, lay calmly down and slept the sleep of the just. - Detroit Free Press.

Home Adornments.

When we were cleaning house last spring we found a pair of fine black broadcloth pants, which were soiled but not much worn, which the 'good man' had thrown aside, not wishing to wear any more. We ripped them earefully apart and cleaned the cloth nicely, and found it was not faded, but would make capital material to embroider on. This was what we used for the lambrequins ntioned in 'Household Econor We have a small stamping outfit, and my daughter cut one of the pieces in points, and did her stamping, then embroidered them, putting a bunch of wild roses on they are not busy. the front points, daisies, on the ones on either side, and fuschies on the end ones. We also ripped an old velveteen dress skirt, and found some parts that were not soiled, which were utilized for small shelf lambrequins for the girls' room. The pattern used on this was wild roses, poppies and wheat. Some of the pat-terns were stamped, others were drawn from magazines on tissue paper and worked over the paper. In this way we have a number of handsome ornaments, with no money outlay except the em-broidery silk, which is only a penny a We get the men to make shelves if they have time; if not, the girls use the saw and hammer, and make them, soda water. perhaps not in a workmanlike manner. but when they are covered they answer

Somebody has unearthed an old prophecy for the year 1886 of a decidedly uncomfortable nature. It appears that in the church of Oberemmel, near the city of Trever, in Germany, there is a stone tablet some centuries old, on which is cut the prophetic verse, in prose it may be rendered: When Mark shall bring us Easter, and Antheny shall sing praises at Penticoat, and John shall swing the censer at the feast of Corpus Domini, then shall the whole earth resound with then shall the whole earth resound with weeping and wailing." Now it so happens that next year Easter falls on St. Mark's day, Pentecest on that of St. Authony of Padua, and the Corpus Domini comes on St. John the Baptist's

Taking Care of the Old People. At Gen. Grant's funeral the other day, what do you think of all the great line of marching people seemed the most impressive? It was not the young soldier with bright new uniforms, but it was the old, gray-headed men, the members of the G. A. R. I could not help thinking how much these men had done for us all, and how grateful the people ought to be. It is no wonder that the country desires to take care of such-men when they grow old and feeble. It seems to me that we look upon these men just as that we look upon these men just as our Rural boys and girls feel towards their parents. I tell you my boys and girls, you never can possibly think too much of your father or your mother. You never can do too much for them. You can't pay them in money for such service as they have done—that is what money never can buy. You have to pay them in kind words and attention, and in trying to do cheerfully what they would like to have done. The poorest boy and the poorest girl can have an equal chance to pay this debt you see. When I see a boy who is glad to live mother I make up my mind that a is going to be a good man. When I see a girl trying to do what she can to help, and not crying about her work, I know what kind of a women she will make. Just remember this now. There is Now it so happens that next year Easter falls on St. Mark's day, Pentecest on that of St. Antheny of Padua, and the Corpus Domini comes on St. John the Baptiat's day, June 24. Here then are the first conditions of the prophecy fulfilled, so that now believers in prophecies and anxious minded persons generally have only to sit down and think of everything ditagreeable that can possibly happen to this poor old planet, and the dwellers thereon between January and December, 1886, and really if the cyclones and earthquakes and epidemies and wars and rumors of wars of the years 1882-3-4-5 are to be eclipsed, the prospect is not an agreeable one.—[Rome Correspondent London Globe.]
