Harvest Ingathering.

The Harvest Ingathering at the Cookstown Road Church, last evening, was a decided success, financially as well as socially. Every available space in both front and rear of the building was filled with improvised seats and standing room only was the order before the exercises began. The programme was filled with missionary life and ideals, the rendering of which showed not only talent, but considerable training on the part of those in charge of the youngsters. Whilst words of commendation might be given each item on the programme yet space will permit of special mention of the choruses "G. double O.D. Good," and "Only a Little Pansy." The solo "He careth for you" was rendered most feelingly by Mrs. Pippy. The chairman gave a brief sketch of the phenomenal growth of the Seventh Day Adventist work especially in both Europe and Asia calling attention to the distinctive features of their special message. Many were the expressions of pleasure and satisfaction as the people filed out of the Church, and it is hoped that the downpour of rain that greeted their return to their homes did not dampen their warmth of appreciation.

STOPPED RUNAWAY.—Saturday night a horse belonging to Mr. J. Coaker, took flight on Water Street. The runaway was stopped by Const. Sheppard before any damage was done.

Takes Courage To Win

No half-hearted "stab" at anything is likely to succeed.

Having the "nerve" to do a thing is based on sound physiology.

"Nerve" includes clear, intelligent, concentrated thinking, plus courage.

But—brain and nerves must be properly fed—nourished—or the "courage to win" is likely to fail.

The Evelyn Wreck

CAPTAIN BURKE AND CREW HERE—A STORY OF PERIL AND SUFFERING—KINDNESS OF FISHER-FOLK.

Captain Burke, of the wrecked schooner Evelyn, mate C. G. Edgecombe, bosun Jas. Rendell, steward George Wright, and able seamen Wm. Collins, Alex. Keefe and Jas. Healey, drove in here overland from Ferryland, yesterday morning. From Captain Burke the Telegram obtained the following interesting particulars of an eventful and disastrous voyage. The Evelyn left Pernambuco for this port on the 10th December, and from that till the 27th had fine weather, then being in the Gulf stream it became stormy and the vessel was driven from S.W. to N.W., and Blew Heavily.

Previous to this on the 22nd, the ship, in lat. 20° 20' North; long. 50° West, spoke the Gaspé, Capt. Connors, from Maccle to St. John's, all well. This stormy weather was the cause of the voyage which came very near being the last for all on board. Saturday and Sunday week, the 4th and 5th insts., the weather cleared, the wind blowing first from south later from the N.W. with hurricane force, with a tremendous sea running and intense frost prevailing. At 4 p.m. Monday land was first sighted in the neighbourhood of Cape Pine, when a blinding snow storm set in and the ship's head was hove to sea. The ship received a fearful overhauling in the terrific sea which ran and which often broke over the bow. At 5.30 p.m. Tuesday when Cape Pine was passed, if possible the wind became more violent, the frost increased tenfold, and sea and spray freezing on the decks, hull and rigging to the depth of several inches, made it almost impossible to work the ship as the running gear could not be handled with any degree of facility and as she was continually sea-swept the crew held the decks only at

The Risk of Their Lives.

Tuesday night all on board spent a miserable and anxious time. It Wednesday morning broke with little change in the weather, and at 2 p.m. that day the ship was 4 miles off the land and about 5 miles north of Bay Bulls. The ship's house flag was then hoisted with the hope that it would be noticed either at Bay Bulls or Cape Spear and the assistance of a tug obtained from either place but nothing came of it, and at 7 p.m. a snow storm set in while the barometer began falling at an alarming rate until it reached 28.60. By midnight in the drift all lights on the coast were obscured and a terrific gale from the S.E. sprang up blowing dead on the land, and veering so that the vessel had to be hove round and headed south in order to try and clear the land. At 4 a.m. Thursday, the wind veered south again, with a Blinding Snow-Storm Prevailing.

The Evelyn carried double reefed mainsail, foresail, and mizzen with boom jib and jumbo, and by 6 a.m. in the blast the jib, mainsail and foresail were torn in ribbons and it looked then as if there was no redemption for ship and crew as the vessel was almost completely at the mercy of the elements. After great exertion the ship's head was hove round so that she might lay more easily in the trough of the sea which time and again made clean breaches over her and took everything movable off the decks while both captain and sailors had narrow escapes from being swept into the surging waters. Badly iceed up as she was, and filled with wet snow, the vessel was now almost out of hand when at 9 a.m. the welcome sight of a steamer in the distance gladdened the despairing hearts of the imperilled mariners. Distress signals were hoisted and the ship which proved to be the Bellaventure, Capt. Cross, bore down on them and hove up near enough for the captain to communicate. Captain Burke knew that in such weather it would be impossible for Capt. Cross to make an effort at rescue, in such a storm as no boat could live in such a sea, nevertheless Capt. Cross generously and gallantly made the offer as already told in the Telegram. Shortly after the Bellaventure, had left for St. John's, the snow cleared and Green Island was sighted and the ship held away south. Then Capt. Burke was discerned and as the vessel had been for hours practically under bare poles with all her canvas gone, it was deemed impossible to clear the land and she was run into Caplin Bay until the lead line recorded 13 fathoms of water and both anchors were let go bringing the ship up. She was checked for only a few minutes, however, for the port chain parted with the straining of the ship in the sea, the starboard anchor dragged and she was swept in on Isle au Bois.

Striking Stern foremost with a crash. The ship grounded at 1 p.m., with a big sea running, fortunately she stranded on a narrow strip of beach and at low tide and at least for the present all hands were safe. However, the prospect was gloomy in the extreme as it looked like a forlorn hope to scale the cliff which rose above them and as no boat could be expected to weather the sea it looked as if inevitable doom was but postponed and that when the tide rose in a few hours, the angry waves would claim their victims. But the brave men, had not weakened in the brave fishermen of Ferryland, who had witnessed their plight, and Captain Burke spoke in terms of the highest praise of their heroism. Soon a skiff manned by H. J. Barnable, Jno. Barnable, Wm. Barnable, Wm. Furlong, M. Devereaux, Jno. Devereaux, Jas. Walsh, Howard Morey and M. White appeared and disregarding the awful weather prevailing endeavored to reach the men by going through what they termed the Y of the "gaps" in the island. In the attempt all came near being drowned, as a big sea broke on the boat killing her and knocking a hole in her and they had to pull for their lives reaching the south side of the island and effecting a landing. Disregarding wet apparel and the elements the men tramped over the island and lowering away

A Narrow Escape

Friday afternoon as Thos. Gosse and David Dunphy, of Torbay, were driving from the woods, they crossed Middle Pond with their teams. Crossing a section which was only covered by a few inches of ice, the leading horse and saddle went through, followed by the other, in very deep water. The men in trying to rescue the animals, fell in themselves and for over an hour battled to reach shallow water by breaking much of the ice. Both men and horses were almost gone and were chilled to the marrow, their clothes being frozen on their backs before they reached home. There were hot springs in this pond which makes it dangerous to travel over in winter.

ONE CUSTOMER WRITES.

Springdale Street,
January 9, 1913.

J. M. DEVINE, "The Right House."

Dear Sir—The most impressive feature of your last week's ad. was that you stated your sale was a genuine one. This I found to be quite true. The goods are reliable and the prices are lower than I have been used to paying. In these days of sales it is not easy to get a genuine one, and on account of this I wish you every success with yours.

I liked the Blankets and must try to get another pair before they are all gone. Am still far from well, cannot get out, and must depend upon the children to do my shopping.

Yours,

J.

Divorce.

BY H. L. RANN.

form in the way of alimony.

Divorce is an American custom which has been legalized to such an extent that the marriage contract is about as binding as a promissory note drawn up on Sunday and signed by a feeble-minded idiot. It has gotten so that people can secure a good, watertight divorce in this country for the price of a secondhand bedstead, but it is not so in other lands. In India, if a man's wife refuses to get up in the morning and split the kindling and bed down the cow, he doesn't have to hire some jack-leg lawyer in order to secure his rights. All he has to do is tie a couple of flatirons about her neck and throw her into the river Ganges, then go out and buy another wife with a piece of telephone wire. Married life in India is only one degree removed from Heaven.

Divorce is granted on any ground that happens to come up first in the mind of the plaintiff, and the courts stand ready to ratify it at so much per rat. It is getting so that a man can't kick his wife several times in rapid succession or accuse her of being a female heretic without having to employ a high-priced attorney to vindicate his character. On the other hand, a wife can go ahead and make the coffee without any egg in it for years, and if the husband tries to secure a divorce on the strength of it he will be thrown out of court so fast that he can see the Big Dipper for a week.

Alimony is an expensive attachment to divorce which is calculated to soothe the lacerated feelings of the divorcee. It is one of the most costly poultices in all materia medica. Some men prefer to let go of the family cookstove and other household treasures rather than pay alimony while others are willing to write any number of checks rather than put up with what they received at the hands of the officiating clergyman.

Obituary.

MRS. RUTH WHITEMARSH.

On Saturday, at the Cochrane St. Methodist Parsonage, there passed away Mrs. Ruth Whitmarsh, at the advanced age of 71. The deceased lady was the wife of the late Robert Whitmarsh, who passed to his reward in May, of last year. Although she had passed the usual span of life, death came somewhat unexpectedly. The cause of death was an attack of pneumonia and heart trouble, and but a few days elapsed between the attack and her demise. She had led a saintly life, and her refined character was a beautiful example to all who were associated with her. Her influence was always for good and she leaves behind her a memory fraught for good. She leaves four sons and a daughter to mourn their loss, to whom the Evening Telegram tenders sympathy. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the Parsonage at half-past two.

SWOLEN ALL WINTER.—People from that section say that the Exploits River has been much higher the past winter than they have seen it for years, while about Rushy Pond, Leach's Brook, the ice has been breaking and rattling all along since the frost began. The like they say was never witnessed in the river before though no person expected to see such damage caused as that of Friday night.

To Hunt Lions In London.

Agitation has been raised against a scheme of lion hunting in London, through the papers, due to the fact that an erroneous report was circulated that there was going to be a "shooting of lions in London," whereas, as a matter of fact, it is not "shooting of lions" but hunting and capturing lions in London that is intended.

A club is being formed, the initiation fee of which is one hundred guineas—$500—which entitles the members to participate (at their own risk) in the hunting and capturing of lions. Each member of the club is entitled to invite five persons at a fee of five guineas and for their safety a number of cages will be dispersed around the enclosure, where they can sit in perfect safety and watch the event. It has been thoroughly explained to the various participants that there is an element of great danger attached to this thing, and before becoming members they have to sign a document relieving others from all responsibility that may occur as a result thereof, permission for shooting being granted only in case of self-defence, when an animal makes a deliberate attack on any of the hunters, in which case they have the right to the use of their rifles, but not otherwise.

It will be a very select affair and the cost of transforming the immense stadium to this special use, will be exceptionally heavy, hence the fee in question. Already very large offers have come in for the cinematograph rights.
