

Challenge Race at Indian Harbor, Labrador

Well Done Newfoundlanders.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

It has always been a matter of surprise to me why a Newfoundland crew have not been sent to Halifax or other cities in the Dominion of Canada to compete in the Annual Regatta, which takes place in the various cities during the summer months. We know from experience that in Bermuda and other parts in which our sailors have competed against the crews of the warships or the mercantile marine, that they have always rendered a good account of themselves, and have invariably been the winning crew. An old sailor of Newfoundland once told me that he won five dollars by betting a friend from another ship, "that no matter who was on some of the cars, there were at least three Newfoundlanders in the winning boat." When asked afterwards how he knew he replied, "by the way the feathered their oars." And he proved to be correct. But while we have heard of many occasions in which our fishermen-sailors maintained the supremacy of our countrymen as oarsmen in southern climes, the challenge race which took place at Indian Harbor, Labrador, was the first occasion in which they maintained their record in the United States warships. The United States squadron of five ships of war visited Indian Harbor, Labrador, about two weeks ago, and their appearance proved a real red letter day in the history of that famous fishing station. They were sent there to watch the movements of the American "round the world air fliers."

During their visit they enjoyed themselves immensely in hunting and fishing up Pettie's Bay, under the guidance of either George or Ernest Jerrett, sons of the enterprising planter, the genial Charlie A. Jerrett, who I suppose, must be looked upon as the Governor-General of that important part of our great Dependency, Labrador. The Americans of the warships also held Regattas between their own seamen of the five ships, and the thought struck George Jerrett, that he would try conclusions with our Yankee friends in a challenge race and show them the mettle of which a Newfoundland fisherman-sailor was composed. The challenge was sent on board the United States flagship Lawrence to row the best boat's crew in the fleet, and the challenge was eagerly taken up—our exhibition knocked into a cocked hat all the latest innovations of the terrace art, such as the Fox Trot and those other colorations that we hear so much about in these days. Mr. Spracklin received quite an ovation.

With reference to the Press Club, I may mention that the newspaper men on the warships have formed themselves into a combination, styled the "Furthest North Press Club," and Mr. George Jerrett is the first man to be admitted an honorary member. It was indeed a most enjoyable event, and our American friends took their defeat in good humor; thus proving that they were really good sports.

George Jerrett was our commander. Jim Percy was second hand; and all the rest were bold young youths brought up in Newfoundland.

Woman a Bundle of Nerves

"Everything irritates me—I am a bundle of nerves. I ache all over and cannot sleep and am so despondent." This extract from a letter written from one woman to another describes the condition of many women who suffer from feminine ailments. Nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs. For fifty years it has been restoring sick and ailing women of America to health and strength.

A Tremendous Success

MARY MILES MINTER SCORES IN A WONDERFUL FEATURE "DRUMS OF FATE."

"Drums of Fate," a new Paramount picture featuring Mary Miles Minter, was shown with great success at the Majestic Theatre last night. The scene at the opening of the picture is laid in New York in the home of Carol Dolliver, a typical modern girl. She is in love with Laurence Teck, a wealthy African explorer, and married him. Teck is supposed to have been killed on one of his expeditions, and Carol remarries a young musical genius, David Verne.

Teck turns up unexpectedly from the jungles, but when he learns the situation, he returns to Africa writing his wife that she may now divorce him on the grounds of desertion. When Carol's husband hears that Teck is alive, he dies from the shock. Carol goes to Africa in search of her husband. She is captured by the same band of carriers that had previously attacked Teck, and is made a captive. She finds Teck, who is a friend of the king, and both find happiness.

Miss Minter does some of the most convincing acting of her career in this production. The supporting cast consisting of Maurice Flynn, George Fawcett, Robert Cain, Casson Fawcett, Robert Grassy and Noble Johnson, rendered excellent support.

This wonderful feature will be repeated to-night and to-morrow. Accompanying "Drums of Fate," is an up to date comedy.

10 Years More Life

LONGER SPAN CAUSES DEARER ANNUITIES.

Despite the rush and turmoil of modern times, babies born to-day are said to have an expectation of 10 years more life compared with their grandparents.

At the British Medical Association's conference which has just ended at Bradford it was stated that the expectation of life had increased enormously.

Just before the war several insurance companies revised their mortality tables, and in 1913 the cost of Government annuities was raised from 5 to 6 per cent. As rates of interest were not so high, as they have been since the war, this increase was due solely to the fact that people were living longer.

Big insurance companies also have had to increase the cost of their annuities since the war for the same reason, an actuary told a Daily Mail reporter. "A great improvement in longevity has been noted even in the last few years," he said, "as was shown when the Institute of Actuaries revised their table about two years ago."

As old statistics were unreliable and varied considerably, there are many different versions as to what the increase in expectation represents. Accurate statistics show, however, that the improvement of mortality for men since 1890 is 20 per cent. and for women 12 per cent. "It was announced at the Guildhall last December that Lt.-Col. Whitaker, the Chief Commisary, who is editor of "Whitaker's Almanack," had said he was revising the tables relating to the expectation of life, which was now more than ten years longer than a few years ago.—Daily Mail.

Only Ten Cents

Nowadays very little can be purchased for a dime, and people have got into the habit of expecting to pay more for most articles. As an exception to the general rule, comes Pearlina, the great washing powder, which sells at any grocer's for ten cents, a big, generous package. It is cheaper than soap and easier to use, in either hot or cold water. Women who use Pearlina, and there are millions of them, know what real satisfactory results are—for this economical washing powder produces wonderful results with little toil. Be sure to try Pearlina. You will find it is a good ten cent investment.—E.

The Nestle Exhibit at the British Empire Exhibition

In visiting the Palace of Industry, one of the most interesting features is the Nestle Stand, which is prominent as an entire departure from the usual stereotyped stand met with in most exhibitions.

This Stand is extraordinarily unique in design and materials, the latter consisting mainly of massive Antique Oak Beams and uprights, which carry the ceiling beams, and white plaster insets, gives an Elizabethan effect to the lobby. The facade, which is supported on the uprights, is finished in Antique Oak and is surrounded and intersected by similar Oak Beam treatment, studded at the joints and carries the name of the firm in solid wood letters, finished in white enamel. These letters are in peculiarly characteristic style always associated with the products of Nestle. They are utilised also for the left-hand return of the facade which bears the firm's well-known slogan "Richest in Cream."

The lobby entrance is particularly roomy and is cleverly arranged to accommodate counter showcases framed in antique oak in complete harmony with the general scheme. In the rear of the lobby is situated a medium sized office.

The chief attraction in the exhibit are two Tableaux consisting of groups of Parisian life-like wax models. The motif of the two groups is "From Infancy to Old Age."

One looks into a kitchen and sees the young mother holding an infant, which, judging by the back year, has been bathed in it and is about to be fed on Nestle's Milk from a bottle which is placed conveniently for the mother's use.

The two older children of the family appear to be very happy playing Peep Bow round their mother's chair, and she herself has her foot resting on a case which has contained tins of Milk and has been converted into a truck. This is a rather clever, homely and natural touch.

with an old man and his wife sitting at the table, about to partake of a cup of tea enriched by Nestle's Milk.

The apartment is complete with an old Grandfather's Clock, which piece of furniture is particularly associated with old houses, the view in the back, respectively, from the open window being that of an English pastoral scene in hilly country, is peculiarly appropriate to the thought of Nestle's Milk which is so closely identified with the rich pastures in England.

A pleasing effect of sunshine is obtained by a clever arrangement of internal lighting.

Three glass showcases are placed in the lobby entrance displaying the Company's products packed in the United Kingdom, Australia and Canada, respectively.

To the left and right of the office in the rear two frames containing replicas of the Royal Warrant and the very numerous other Awards and Medals gained all over the world are seen, and cannot fail to interest and impress the public.

The same remarks, too, may be used in describing the colored sero photos and other photographs of the many important Condenseries in this country and abroad.

The Stand is situated in the Dairy Section of the Food Exhibits and approaching from the Palace of Industry from the main entrance, this Section is in the quarter nearest the Stadium Side.

The Stand has been specially designed for Messrs Nestle by the Architect Wm. Braxton Sinclair, Esq., F.R.I.B.A., and apart from its general impressiveness, is an architectural feature.

Sir Lawrence Weaver, addressing the Incorporated Sales Managers Association some weeks ago, on the importance of the Exhibition from the point of view of trade, summarised the wishes of the Organisers that all exhibitors would do their utmost to make each Stand a centre of attraction and interest for the benefit of the British Manufacturers generally, and the motive of the Exhibition.

In regard to this particular exhibit, one feels that this policy has been carried out to the utmost and one cannot but offer congratulations to Messrs. Nestle on their handsome effort.

Medicine Bottle Habit

DOCTOR'S CRITICISM OF AN IDOL.

Speaking at the medical sociology section of the British Medical Association, Dr. A. E. Barnes, Sheffield University, said serious modern tendencies are the increasing use of drugs, the fostering of the bottle of medicine habit, which has become an idol, and the increase in neurosis. "Keep a dog constantly chained, and he will get neurotic. The same applies to a young man chained to a monotonous machine."

When the millionaire reaks down and retires to a nursing home, it is put down to business worries. When the working man goes into hospital he is called a malingering. The cause is the same.
