Mourning the Death of the Indian Police - Effects of Sittling Bull's Death.

Fears that the Followers of the Dead Chief will seek to Avenge His Death.

BIENNAIS, N. D., Dec. 16. - The country is terribly wrought up over Sittling Bull's killing, and instead of an easy feeling, now that the old Sioux warrior is dead, much apprehension is felt.

The 100 or so followers of Sittling Bull who are swarming over the country, will terrorize the settlers on the frontier, and it is feared that many an innocent family will suffer on account of this action of the military authorities.

The conflict, in which over a dozen were shot dead, is looked upon as a bad move.

The cavalry troops are blamed for permitting the Indian police to ride off so far in advance, when, if the two bodies had come upon the horse, the latter would have been overwhelmed.

Crowfoot, Sittling Bull's son, who was killed in the engagement, was a bright lad about 12 years old.

Nothing definite can be learned from Standing Rock by telegraph, as there is nothing but a military wire and the officials will permit the transmission of official matters only.

The situation is now serious. It is not for a moment doubted that the telegraph instruments at the government signal office have been clicking incessantly since yesterday morning. A force was kept on all last night, something never before done, and messages to and from army headquarters were constantly going through.

Efforts of correspondents to gather any detail have been futile. The scene on the reservation today when the Indians gathered around the bodies of the dead warriors was one that cannot easily be described. The Indian policemen, in uniform, were seen in the distance, and the flower of the tribe. With his shiny uniform he is a more prominent personage among the reds than the highest chief.

The squaws will keep up the death song for weeks; they will cut off their hair, chop pieces from their fingers and stain their bodies fantastically. An enterprising merchant of Biemais this morning made an offer of $1000 for Sittling Bull's hide.

On Dec. 16, up to noon to-day no further news was received as to army headquarters regarding the situation in the Northwest. Speaking of the death of Sittling Bull, Adj. Gen. Corbin said to an Associated Press reporter that it was most probably the beginning of the end of the trouble.

He said that as Sittling Bull was dead, the Indians who had been fighting him, a medicine man, would come into the agency within the next two or three days, when they hear of his death.

If they do not, Gen. Corbin has things in store to make short work of them. They are penned up in the bad lands, where nobody lives and where they can do no damage.

THE CHIEF'S SILENT SPREADER.

On Dec. 16, the Indians of the ranches near Chico have commenced the Mesquah or ghost dance in the ranches or sweat house. Remnants of all the tribes still remaining in Butte county are participating.

The dance is held each year about January but was hastened this year by a strange Indian, who came in from Nevada and told the tribes here that their brethren in the East were dancing and that the Mesquah would surely come.

Some 300 participants will dance. They seem to be very enthusiastic and excited over coming events.

The Nevada Indian made a long exhortation and predicted that the Indians would soon rule California again, when the Mesquah came.

The dance is only a religious fever, participated in by the elderly Indians. They are civilized, attend school and have a chapel for services, and it is held in town and on the ranches. Hundreds of white people have attended the dance.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

THE WHEEL.

No thing in recent months has caused such a commotion in amateur athletic ranks as the recent suspension of famous bicyclists by the League of American Wheelmen. The charges against the riders are that they have overstepped the bounds of amateurism by accepting money from the clubs to which they belong.

The actual output for traveling expenses to the various racing meets has been estimated at $10,000. The A.A.U. officials, however, have a feeling that the L.A.W. have in some cases acted without reason.

President Schuyler and William B. Curtis of the New York Athletic Club do not deny that the bicyclists of their club had their expenses paid to many of the meets. The A.A.U. officials, however, have a feeling that the L.A.W. have in some cases acted without reason.

LIBRARY.

After months of discussion, wrangling and newspaper comment, the famous Leroux increase case has been finally settled, and the Cornwall player is proclaimed a professional. Some two weeks ago Mr. George Higginbotham, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Athletic association, received the last word of the members by mail. It was against Leroux, and made the vote eight to six in favor of declaring him a professional committee, consisting of Messrs. Pearson, Stave and Macdonald, were divided in their report on the evidence of Mr. Stark favoring the player. At a special meeting of the association it was resolved to send a list of all evidence and the

GIRLS' SCHOOL.

Annual Examination - First Distribution Under the Ample of the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Nelson.

Yesterday, the proceedings in connection with the Christmas distribution of prizes took place at the Girls' School, and were largely attended by both parents and friends.

The examination of the scholars was of the most satisfactory character, and their replies to the questions asked of them being prompt and, at the same time, remarkably concise and accurate. Indeed, as was remarked by many people who were in attendance, there must have been a wonderful amount of study on the part of the scholars, whose appearance, as they sat in their places, exhibited a high standard of intelligence among them.

In the afternoon, the distribution of prizes, which was presided over by Dr. Pope, superintendent of education, with Messrs. Macdonald, Krake and Walker, took place. The prizes were distributed to the scholars, and the following special jury: Wm. Dalby (foreman), James Macdonald, Mr. Nelson, Geo. H. Maynard, Thos. J. Devlin, Mr. S. P. Mills appeared for the petitioners. Mr. S. P. Mills appeared for the petitioners. Mr. S. P. Mills appeared for the petitioners.

The evidence, as presented by the petitioners, was that the husband of the deceased, who was a carpenter of this city, for a divorce from his wife, Elizabeth Scott, the respondent, and $2,500 damages from John McCarty, the co-respondent, was before the Superior court, all yesterday, and resulted in a verdict for the petitioner with full damages asked in the pleading. Mr. Justice Drake occupied the bench, and the case was tried by the following special jury: Wm. Dalby (foreman), James Macdonald, Mr. Nelson, Geo. H. Maynard, Thos. J. Devlin, Mr. S. P. Mills appeared for the petitioners. Mr. S. P. Mills appeared for the petitioners.

FIVE BRIDGES FALL.

Immense Destruction Done by the Floods in Cowichan-One River Still Rising.

Damages Roughly Estimated at a Quarter of a Million Dollars - Measure Information.

Although information is reported to the disastrous floods on Cowichan flats was very hard to obtain yesterday, still the measure details available show the damage done to be very much greater than any one anticipated. Although the waters of the Chemakum and Kowichan were falling yesterday morning, the Cowichan continued to rise, and, when day broke, it was seen that the angry waters had not been tamed during the night. All the government bridges of the three rivers - four in all - are reported gone, and at 6 o'clock, the railway bridge, a very substantial structure, erected in 1884 at a cost of more than $100,000, was being received from wild logs during the night. It was a two-span Howe truss, arches being 100 and 100 feet in length, respectively. Ten minutes or less the bridge went down, the work crew on the scene were ready to ferry passengers and freight over the scuttling waters, dividing the two lines of track. These transfers were made without the slightest mishap, and the large audience, completely composed of those interested in the fate of the sewerage works, were consequently, as the bridge was available today, the track, however, and below the river, in firm, and traffic in no way endangered by the flood. During the morning the telegraph wires were down, but, early in the afternoon, communication was restored. No human lives have been lost, and so far as known, no horses or cattle. Of the big boom of logs, containing 7,000 logs, belonging to the Cowichan mill, fully two-thirds have been swept away, while many outbuildings and fences have either floated away or been destroyed. It is believed that the devastation of the flood will amount to more than a quarter of a million dollars, while, as it is still raining, it is likely to be largely increased. The work of replacing the railway bridge by a temporary one, during the erection of a new structure, will be completed to-day, and as time will be lost in replacing the bridge permanently. The water-proof theory is gaining ground among those anxious to account for the origin of the flood, as such a device has never before been experienced on Vancouver Island.
