War Was Near At One Time

An Incident of Supposed Land

When War was Averted by Hairbreath --- Russians Still Massing.

Many Trains Running Daily to Mass Russians on Korean Border.

(From Friday's Daily.)

According to advices received by the steamer Olympia, which arrived yesterday from the Orient an accident which happened to a Russian warship during October last prevented the threatened war in the Orient from being started some weeks ago. It was on the occasion of the visit of the Japanese squadron to Masampho—the occasion of the alarm at Port Arthur consequent to that action and the hurried rush of Russian warships to the Korean port to find the Japanese at anchor there. As will be remembered cables at that time told of the despatch of Japanese troops to Korea, and subsequent denials were telegraphed by the Japanese officials, who said that the reports had originated by the sending of garrisons to Korea to guard telegraph lines. And then all was silent. (From Friday's Daily.)

guard telegraph lines. And then all was silent.

A correspondent though now tells the clever ruse which was then carried out by the Japanese to test the Russian intent vis-a-vis Japan. The arrival of the warships of Japan at Masampho was not an occupation, nor was it to land troops in force as then cabled—nothing more than a clever ruse, which land troops in force as then cabled—nothing more than a clever ruse, which, had it not been for an accident to one of the Russian vessels would have precipitated war between Russia and Japan. What really happened, according to a correspondent, is that a Japanese squadron, apparently convoying a number of transports sailed into Masampho. To all intents and purposes it seemed as though the landing of a large Japanese force was intended, but in reality there were only one or two colliers with there were only one or two colliers with these transports. Before the expedi-tion started, though, the Japanese, al-lowed rumors of an intended landing of troops to leak out, and those were soon cabled to the outside world. Correspondents at Port Arthur have told of the alarm these reports occasioned there, of the hurried departure of the Russian fleet and of the belief of every Russian in the vicinity that war was a matter of
