THE SAVED. A Boat's Crew Lost - Four Perso

NORTH SYDNEY, C B, Dec 1—Some of those rescued from the wrecked steamer Cedar Grove have arrived here. The following is the statement of the chief steward. He says: "I was on the deck of the Cedar Grove with the lady in one arm and holding on with the other when a sea washed the lady from my grasp." The mate says he and the captain were standing the general to Egypt to take the command of the force levied by Baker Pasha. As Baker does not hold a commission in the British army, he is not competent to assume the command over British officers. NORTH SYDNEY, C B, Dec 1-Some of ing on the starboard side of the chart-room when the captain sent him forward to let go the anchor, when the bow of the steamer went down with him and the lady. the captain or the lady, and he thinks they are lost, as there was little or nothing floating to which they might cling until rescued.

Canso, Dec. 1—There are no tidings of the captain or Miss Fairall, though one of the crew remembers having seen the steward with his arm about the lady, endeavoring to get her into the boat, when a heavy sea washed both away. With the eleven arrived at North Sydney the total saved is twenty-six, leaving five—Captain Fritz, Miss Fairall, the second and third engineers, and an unknown person—still missing. Wreckers were very busy yesterday at the scene of the disaster. A great many small packages were picked up, but no bodies. Lloyds' agent arrived to-day and immediately proceeded to Walker's Head to take charge of the wreck.

Fox, who has been employed at the Scoville car-wheel works for fourteen years, attempted to commit suicide yesterday by plunging his head into a pot of molten metal. He had been acting strangely for a day or two, and had seemed unusually absent-minded, but no particular attention was paid to it. On this occasion he stood in a paid to it. On this occasion he stood in a thoughtful mood, and utterly oblivious to what was going on about him; then he contemplated the vessel of fiery fluid for a few minutes, and to the horror of his fellow workmen, fell on his knees and deliberately thrust his head into the acathing mass.

About twenty boys were present from the newsboys' lodgings, and the little arabs were taught in half an hour to read sentences written in shorthand on the blackboard. The absurdities of our present English spelling were "shown up" by the lecturer who defended phonetic spelling, and answered etymological objection by explaining the derivation of the word "loot," which is used frequently in an american editor to be related to "lute," an instrument on which the player strums with his fingers; hence "loot" means "anything yea can get your finger on." So ga-loot is an urchin who is collared by a policeman; sa-lint means a motion of the fingers to the hat; so f-lute is an instrument played with the fingers. This sally at etymology greatly amused the audience, who, at the close of the lecture, gave Mr. Bengough a nearty demonstration.
