

slight reservations. Over all, the principle of items espoused are generally accepted.

A Canada clause in the Constitution, I cannot help but feel from the people whom I have spoken to in the past that yes, indeed. How can I define what it feels like to be Canadian when I have no guidance or no leadership in this particular area.

I think that item seven dealing with the inclusion of a Canada clause in the Constitution seems to address Canadians' lust for truly wanting to be Canadian.

I see my time is rapidly passing me by and I have merely got into the first third of what I was going to say this evening. It is obvious that there is much more that I will have to say with respect to the report card that I will be presenting to the House of Commons from the constituents of Regina—Wascana.

The Constitution

I should close out of respect for the clock. I encourage those who have not taken the time to fill out these forms, to do so because I will be collating all the data that I have received from my constituents as well as all individual comments and will be responding to the residents of Regina—Wascana.

Again, I want to say to the residents of my constituency, how relieved I am that they have accepted these 28 proposals and accepted a united Canada.

Madam Deputy Speaker: It being ten o'clock p.m., pursuant to order made Wednesday, February 5, 1992, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at ten o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 24(1).

The House adjourned at 10 p.m.