

Western Development Exceeds That of Any Country in the World

Sir Donald Mann Returns from Inspection Trip More Than Ever Impressed With Canadian West—Work on C.N.R. Lines Is Being Rushed to Completion.

Sir Donald Mann, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, returned to Toronto last night, after a three weeks' trip to Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., in connection with the C.N.R. western terminals and bridge work. He brought back the report that everything is progressing most favorably for the establishment of the joint terminal system at the three Pacific coast cities—Vancouver, Victoria and Port Mann. As far as Vancouver is concerned, the date has been passed by the city council and comes before the people for decision next month.

Regarding the progress being made on the C. N. R. transcontinental, Sir Donald Mann, when seen by The World at night, deplored the fact that much of the line, and that as well, should have been pushed forward with much speed and great progress could be expected from now on. Of the 75 miles of the western end of the line, that section from Yellowhead Pass to Lytton, or Cisco Bridge, B.C., would be completed by next April, leaving but 100 miles of the 750 miles still to be done.

Seven Thousand Men at Work.

Great progress was also being made with the Port Arthur section of the C. N. R. transcontinental. Seven thousand men were now at work on this section of the line, and it is well, should be completed early next year. In fact, Sir Donald was of the opinion that close of this coming year will see the completion of the transcontinental.

The Best Harvest

Sir Donald was enthusiastic over this year's wheat crop. "It is the best and biggest harvest that I have ever seen in the west, and if we only get good weather, it will probably all be there and saved," said the C. N. R. vice-president. "There has, however, been a little shortening in the size of the crop, but the weather out there now is very good."

"I believe that the lateness of the crop caused by the wet weather will be responsible for a great railway construction. This is not the fault of the railways. They have been busy for the past two months with building stock, waiting idle for the harvest. This means that the crop is to be brown on their right in a lump—in a day. But to make up for this, the railways are in a much better position to handle the crops than ever before."

"I do not think there will be much grain go to ruin this year. It is being stored in a large amount of grain stock all thru last winter and when placed on the market in the spring fetched a price of ten cents or more higher than that of the previous fall."

Men Are Needed

"There is still a great shortage of men," declared Sir Donald. "This is due to the fact that the men who were secured had not the opportunity to get work on account of the wet weather."

The C. N. R. vice-president was impressed with the rapid growth of the west. "The growth of the west is very great," said Sir Donald. "It is being settled and developed faster than any other new country in the history of the world along all lines. When the western states of the United States were settled, the settlers that went out were poor and had to borrow money at 25 to 30 per cent. per annum, and found it necessary to buy everything on the installment plan. The Canadian west, on the contrary, is being settled by men with capital, who come to take up land and develop it by the use of the most modern machinery. Such men use the steam and gasoline plow, working night and day with a double crew and turning over sixty acres in the twenty-four hours. The farmers in the west are exceedingly prosperous. I know of one farmer in the west who had 128,000 bushels of wheat in addition to his other crops."

Was Not Shot

Sir Donald denied emphatically that he had either been shot or shot at while at Vancouver. "There was a lunatic there who declared his intention not only of assassinating me, but also of taking the life of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and the late Mr. Harriman, the mere fact of Mr. Harriman already being dead seeming to make no difference to him," said Sir Donald. "As far as I was concerned, I never saw the man, the detectives of Vancouver becoming aware of the poor fellow's intentions and placing him in jail before he had a chance to do anything. It was a case of a man who had lost his mind."

Canadian Club Hears of General Brock

General Brock, the dauntless soldier and savior of Canada, was the subject of the regular weekly luncheon of the Canadian Club at Mr. Mackenzie's restaurant in celebration of the centenary of the heroic general's death at Queenston Heights in the memorable battle of 1812.

The colonel did not specifically dwell upon the battle and General Brock's conduct upon that occasion, but rather went into details, displaying the tremendous difficulties under which Brock labored in mobilizing and getting his little force in shape for the struggle. Britain was at this time engaged in a life and death struggle with Napoleon, the greatest military strategist the world has ever known, and it was hopeless therefore to expect any assistance from the mother country to well Canada's little army of 6000 untrained men. Fifteen hundred British regulars were, however, spared to assist in the defence of the Dominion, making an army of under 11,000 men to cope with an invading nation of 80,000 population.

The colonel outlined how Brock was handicapped still further by a disloyal parliament, which refused to pass a temporary suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act to allow Brock to effectually deal with the numbers of traitors and spies which at that time infested the country. These, he explained, were for the most part Americans, who had taken advantage of Governor Simcoe's offer of free homesteads, and moved into Canada. These, he pointed out, were opposed to a monarchy. They were Americans at heart, not loyal British subjects, and Brock had hundreds of these to deal with.

"In his search for loyal soldiers, he turned to the York Volunteers, then 400 strong, and asked every man who would stick to him thru thick and thin, to step to the front, and gentlemen, the whole four hundred of those Toronto men stepped forward."

"Even at the moment the Battle of Queenston Heights was being fought, there were in the Niagara Jail, upwards of 500 against whom treason had been proven, guarded by about 60 old and infirm men, unfit for service, and armed with only one date musket, scythe, or any other weapon they happened to possess."

Lord Milner, who was present as a guest of the club, made a vote of thanks, accompanying it with a few appropriate remarks.

Contest Queries Answered Today

In the contest that has come to the attention of the Contest Manager is the following from an Ontario contestant:

Would it make any difference to you after I win the automobile if I changed it to one that I could draw in my turpentine washdays, and still have it fixed so that I could take my girl to church in on Sundays? Gussie, my girl, and I have been just longing for years to get an auto, so send her along with the papers. Signed (Hired Man).

P. S.—I forgot to add that next summer, when you fellows take your holidays, you will only need to phone me and I will meet you at the station. Oh, what a time us farmers and editors will have together.

Of course, we cannot see any objection to the changing of the automobile to meet the desired requirements of this particular contestant, should he be so fortunate as to win it. In fact, the winners of all of the prizes will be they please with them.

Another contestant who thinks that the Proverb illustrations are entirely too easy, expresses himself pectically:

"The prizes! The prizes! It really is too thing. The proverbs are so easy. That everyone will win."

Who's going to pick the winners? There won't be any fight. A whole million answers. And everyone is right.

You give us all the pictures, Almost the answers, too. Why, even a girl could name them. Our brains have not to do.

Please give us something harder. And let the boys win. The first ones are so easy. It really is a sin.

We are making a notation of the above, for later on in the competition we will expect to have another poem from this same competitor which will be just the reverse.

Owing to the large number of queries it has been decided to publish only answers to the queries, giving only the initials of the writer and the street number or town as the case may be. A good plan for contestants would be to keep copies of their papers, as only the answers will be published.

G. B. Spadina avenue—in the event that two or more contestants have an equal number of correct answers, the one with the least number of coupons will be declared the winner.

Mrs. W. H. 18 Sidney street—If there is another family living in the same house with you it would be considered two households.
