JEAU CHRIST WORTHY OF THE HIGHEST HONOURS.—Rev

1. Come Let us jo our cheerful songs
Our lovery Jesu et adore;
To Him our highest praise helongs,
Who safe has brought us home once more.

2. He has dispelled each gloomy fear, Conducted us thus safely home; And at His house we now appear, And breathing cry, sweet Jesus come

A few more times and we shall leave, The toils and dangers of the seas; Shall cease to mourn and cease to grieve, Enjoy an endless life of case.

Enjoy an endices life of case.

4. Our happy souls will then take wing, And fly the blassful mansions o'er; Admire the beauties of the King. Nor sin, nor sigh, yea weep no more.

5. Then we shall meet in Heaven above, Where all is peace, where all are blest; Where all is harmony and love, In endless day, in endless rest.

At New-York, on the 19th November, Judge Enwants pronounced James Ranson, for the nurder of his wife.

James Ranson.—After a fair trial, in which you was defended with distinguished ability by our counsel, a Jury of your country at a previous Court, have pronounced you guilty of the crime of marier. Upon the application of your counsel, the Court suspended your stateace, to enable you to take the opinion of the Suprane Court upon a question which arose on your trial. That Court has confirmed the decision of this; and it now renains to pass sentence upon you. The circumstances attending your case were of a peculiarly atrocious character. Your victin was the write of your bosom, and by necessary consequence her happiness main'd depended upon you. Every consideration of justice and hammity required that you should have contributed your best exertions for promoting her welfare. Yet how were these obligations requited? You abandoned yourself to a course of intemperance; you exiled yourself to years from your family; and finally, without even my reasonable canse for complaint, you premeditately inflicted a deadly blow upon her. What a scene of decolution did you spread around you! By one that act, your wine was sent to the cold and silent mansions of the dead; your children deprived of all the endearments and fostering care of their another—and you, rash and ruttless man, are fated to expiate your follow-beings what countries the desolating relation, from the ties of blood, from your obligations to your fellow-beings and to your fellow-beings who can be a fellow to the cold man strenge of incomments and festering to your fellow-beings and to your fellow-beings and to your fellow-beings of the cold with the part very superior articles, and those who want had better call soon.

The capital of this Company, $200,000, has been all paid in, and invested in the best securities; independently of which, a staplits Fixe of more than $35,000 has been set apart to meet the occasional claims for losses, and the stock bears a high premium.
