

ANGLICANS OF WEST SIDE PLAN MEN'S CAMPAIGN

Laumen's Association Discusses Interesting of Men in Church Work

A combined meeting of the members of the Laumen's Association of the three Anglican churches on the west side of the harbor, Good Shepherd, St. George's and St. Jude's, was held last evening in the hall of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Fairville, when plans were made for a united campaign for enlisting men in the work of the church.

Rev. F. J. LeRoy, rector of the Fairville church, opened the meeting with prayer and, outlined the purpose for which the gathering had been called, to join the three associations in a campaign to be conducted during the next month among the men of the three congregations. He asked that a layman be chosen to preside and Commissioner W. L. Harding was chosen. The meeting also named P. Hamm as secretary.

Rev. J. H. A. Holmes, rector of St. Jude's, and Rev. John Unsworth, rector of St. George's, were also present and each made an earnest appeal to the men for their co-operation. After discussion the meeting adopted a resolution calling for the launching of the campaign which is to end on the first Sunday in Advent. It was hoped to have special services on three successive Sundays and to have the services on the last Sunday particularly arranged for the occasion. It was hoped to have His Lordship Bishop Richardson attend a meeting to be held in December in connection with the campaign.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

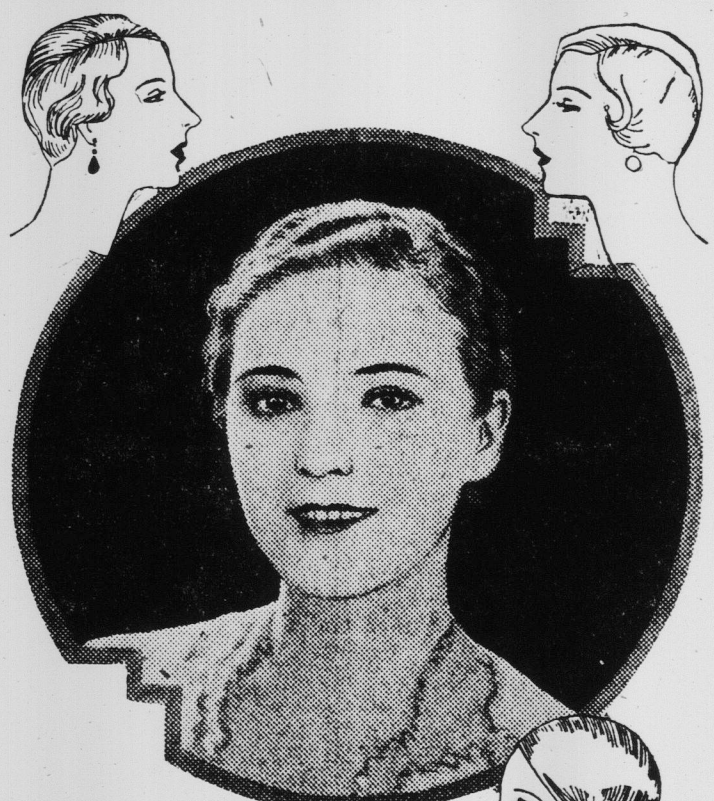

A committee was appointed to make plans for the campaign and those chosen were as follows: Rev. F. J. LeRoy, chairman; P. J. Legge and Mr. Hazelwood from St. Jude's; S. Olive and Mr. Belyea from St. George's; and A. O. Paterson and F. Hamm from the Good Shepherd church. The committee will meet next Monday night at the rectory in Fairville.

At the close of last night's meeting a committee from St. George's congregation served refreshments.

FATHER: So you wish to marry my daughter, eh? So you believe, young man, that you could support a family?

Son: Well, ah—er—that is—yes, sir, I was only figuring on Ellen, but I suppose it's Good Shepherd I can take care of the rest of you, too—Judge.

SHINGLING PROMOTES CHIC

DESPITE a somewhat weak hearted attempt to let the crowning locks of the present day beauty grow into lengths of importance, Paris keeps on shingling the head with new and interesting results.

One of the most important notes about the modern hair cut is the fact that features are being considered. Where the face demands it there is now a fullness, a lightly curled coiffure which suits the young person of renaissance features, while her Grecian model sister may crop and shingle her hair into lines of forbidding severity.

The sheep-like fashion of following the leader is happily past, and now one does not shingle for the sake of being as everyone else is. If a loose, fluffy bob is more becoming, the smart woman wears it. If the features stand up well under close clipping scissors, the ears may be left to enjoy their freedom of the moment. In fact, women have learned the art of becoming individuals of good taste and discretion.

In fact, there is a modified shingle that is gaining a vast amount of popularity. It permits a shingled back and long sides which may softly frame the face or curl into odd treatments above the ears. In other women the hair is allowed to grow at will in the back and devote itself to interesting chignons, while the fronts and sides remain discreetly shingled.

The vogue of the boyish bob, showing bare ears, closely cropped head and point in the back, is on the wane. In its place has come a fare for haircuts of extreme individuality. The point is no longer a necessary route to chic at the back of the head. It may be present if it is becoming, but it is decidedly not an essential part of a smart headress. The hard line given by clippers is not desirable. The neck should certainly be trim, but not hard.

Waves also are on the wane. The mode now demands simplicity in its chic lines, and the deeply curled head does not often afford a route to smartness. A very full and slightly waved outline is always smart and is particularly becoming to those whose features demand a softness of coiffure.

White hair is now a symbol of chic, and dyed locks are decidedly taboo. White hair, properly shingled to suit the features, is often found one of the most attractive heads in an assemblage. It is particularly appealing when accompanied by an evening gown of elegant lines and mauve, pink or blue in color.

Visits Paid To Women's Institutes

Miss H. Dykeman, director of public health nursing services, has returned from a tour of visits to the Women's Institutes in Madawaska county, during which she was accompanied by Miss Estelle LeBlanc, assistant superintendent of the Women's Institutes of the province. The visits were made for the purpose of organizing medical school inspection tonsil and adenoid clinics, and also for the purpose of interesting the institute members in public health matters in general, particularly those of infant welfare.

The meetings were largely attended and the institute members showed much interest in the proposed clinics and in infant welfare matters. At Ledges, the visit of Miss Dykeman and Miss LeBlanc coincided with the date of the exhibition of farm products, poultry and the Women's Institute domestic arts and a combined meeting of the men, women and children of that locality was addressed by them.

Miss LeBlanc gave her address in French and held the close attention of her audience for fully an hour.

MAN MAKES $30,000 WHILE IN 3 YEARS' SPELL OF AMNESIA

Ex-Official of Chicago Board of Education Found by Son in Texas

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 11.—Lewis Larson, former auditor of the Board of Education of Chicago, who was traced here by his son after having been lost for three years, today explained his disappearance as due to a lapse of memory. Mr. Larson tonight was on his way to Texarkana, where he will join his wife, his son and a daughter.

Mr. Larson, who under the name of "E. Lawson" has been successful in business here, said he does not remember when he left Chicago or when he came to Texas. He said his lapse of memory was due to overwork in Chicago. He declared he put on from sixteen to eighteen hours daily in a business he was promoting and his nerves went back on him.

"I remember going to the river in Chicago to drown myself," he said. "That was because I was broken in health and weary in mind and thought I could not make my family happy. When I reached the river and put off my coat to make the plunge something told me not to do it. I put my coat on and started home. I have just found myself and am now returning to my family. I am happy and know the family will be the same."

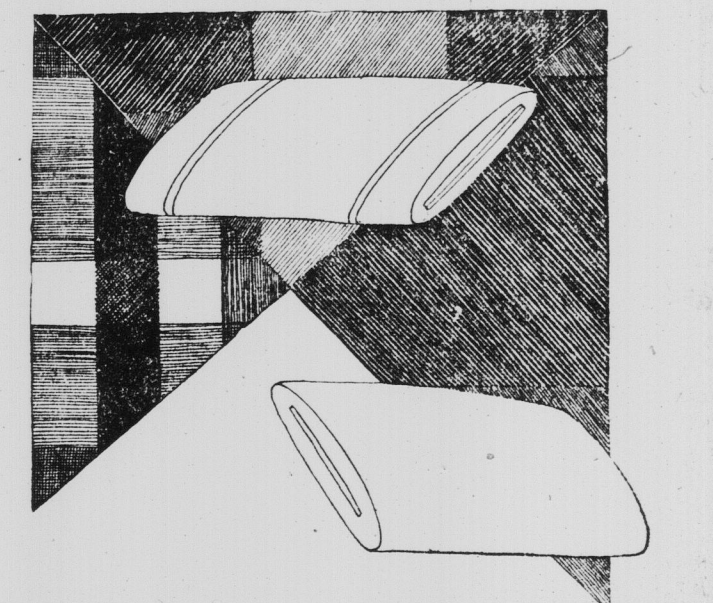

"I remember when I arrived at Shreveport and obtained a position. I worked there for a time and then went to Dallas, where I sold automobiles. Later I engaged in the street paving and road contracting business, where I made some money. I am going back to Chicago to take up business where I left off."

The discovery of Larson was due to efforts of his son, Leonard, who left school to search for his father here last week and went to Louisiana, where it was believed the elder Larson was living. In Louisiana the son learned his father had been in quarters in Dallas, and was then in a small town in West Texas in connection with highway building.

Today he left Fort Worth for Texarkana, after being advised his family was awaiting him there.

Larson was connected with the Dallas Asphalt Company. He is said to own stock in this concern and probably is worth $50,000.
