The Pictorial Review Magazine for May is the biggest and finest yet. More souvenir paintings "The American Charge at Sedan," and the "Flight in the Argonne" are two full colored, full page, paintings in the May issue. The fourth instalment of Dangerous Days, the tremendously interesting serial everybody is talking about, also short stories, the kind that have made Pictorial Review famous. You also get the first glimpse of early summer novelties, and seventy-seven of the smartest and newest styles described and illustrated in full color. Don't miss this issue. Now on sale at our pattern counter. Daniel, Head of King street.

Our System of Testing Insures Uniformity and Dependability in Dominion Rubber System Belting

Probably the elements that create the most satisfaction in the use of any article are an accurate knowledge of what it will do before it is made and to prove that it will efficiently accomplish its purpose after it is made.

It is on this basis that we build our belting and the knowledge of what it will do is the result of over fifty years experience and research.

We prove by careful tests that every ounce of material is up to our high standard—each individual operation is checked as the belt proceeds from one machine to the next and a sample of the finished belt is tested, both chemically and physically, to prove that it will efficiently serve the purpose for which it was made and that it has a reserve of strength for emergencies.

We want you to test not only our claims of superiority for Dominion Rubber System belting, but our free belting service, in charge of belting experts, who can help to cut your manufacturing costs, by making your equipment more efficient.

A phone, wire or letter to our nearest service branch will enable you to test this service without obligation.
