SAYS FALLS BRIDGE SHOULD BE IN ITS POSITION BY FALL

The late spring is causing some delay in the work on the structure of the new highway bridge at the falls. Contractor W. B. McVay said this morning that the weather was too cold today for the men to work. More important was the fact that they could not get their granite down the river until the ice came out. Men were at work now at Spoon Island quarrying and preparing the stone and it would be brought down as soon as the river opened.

NINE BELOW FREEZING AND 40 MILE WIND; AND THIS IS APRIL 23

For doggoned stick-to-tiveness, the winter certainly wins. Spring is having a hard time to dislodge it. There are some inclined to believe that the calendar is lying, for it was hard this morning to believe that it was April 23. With the thermometer nine degrees below freezing point, and the wind blowing a forty-mile gale, the air was anything but spring-like.
