A MAINE ELECTION

A very vigorous political campaign in the third Maine congressional district closes this week. Besides the Democratic and Republican candidates, there is a Progressive in the field, and the fight has been waged with great vigor. President Wilson sent a letter personally endorsing Mr. Pattangall, the Democratic candidate. The tariff has been a leading topic of discussion during the campaign, and the Bangor Commercial has been presenting the case for lower duties with great ability and force. In the course of an article in yesterday's issue, the Commercial presents the following the course of an article in yesterday's issue, the Commercial presents the following the campaign presents the following the campaign presents the following the course of an article in yesterday's issue, the Commercial presents the following the campaign presents the following the campa issue, the Commercial presents the following considerations in support of tariff reduction, which are not without some interest for Canadians at the

"There is every indication that the provisions of the Democratic tariff bill for free meats, free wool, free sugar and reduced duty on many other necessities will be a great benefit to the people. In the matter of free beef, only a few days ago a New York man imported 100,000 pounds from Agentine, and this was disposed of at a price from 1 1-2c. to 2c. less than native beef was being sold for, and yielded a fair profit to the importer at that, after paying the duty.

In regard to free wool, everybody realizes that in the winter season we re quire woollen clothing to protect the body from severe cold weather. It is the belief that free wool means warmer and more durable clothing and at a reduced price. The wool grower doesn't need the protection of a high duty, as formerly, because the mutton or lamb carcass sells for double what it did a few years ago. Free wool would reduce the large amount of shoddy now being mixed with woollen goods, which is now being sold to the people for all wool.

THE SUSSEX GAS WELL

Sussex Record—The gas boring operations are going along smoothly. Each day shows that more interest is being taken by our citizens on account of the increased number of visilitors at the works. On Tuesday and Wednesday gas pockets were struck, which caused some little excitement among those who were in the vicinity at the time. The gas, of course, didn't last long, but was sufficient to leave a strong smell and set people thinking of what was probably to come. The hole is now down about 350 feet. At present the drill is going through limestone, which makes hard boring, but this stone has always been met with wherever gas was found.
